U. N. Orders Arabs, Jews To Stop War In 3 Days

Security Council Declares Conflict Threat to Peace Under Charter

Lake Success, July 15 (NYHT).—The Security Council tonight declared the Palestine war a threat to peace within the most stringent provisions of the United Nations Charter.

The Council ordered Arabs and Jews to stop fighting in Palestine as a whole within three days.

In Jerusalem, it told the two sides to cease fire unconditionally within 24 hours.

In a resolution which stressed the word "order," the Council invoked the threat of economic sanctions or military force to end a dispute for the first time in U. N. history. Failure by any government concerned to desist from military action, it said, will require consideration of these penalties under Chapter VII of the Charter.

Syria, Egypt Regret Order

During the long debate which followed introduction of the resolution by the United States three days ago, Israel announced it would comply with the order. Two Arab nations, Syria and Egypt, declared today that Arabs would be unable to accept it.

Mahmoud Bey Fawzi of Egypt told the Council the resolution would be disastrous to Arab interests and to peace in the whole of the Middle East. Faris El Khouri of Syria said he entertained no hope there could be any result from a resolution which "gives them (Arabs) orders and treats them as aggressors."

The order did not in itself distinguish between Arabs and Jews in telling them to behave. In a preamble, however, it pointed out that Israel had accepted prolongation of the four-week truce which expired last week, while "states members of the Arab League have rejected successive appeals."

Votes on Resolution

Those parts of the resolution which declared the threat to peace and ordered a cease-fire were passed, 8 to 1, with Syria opposing and China and the Argentine abstaining.

Soviet Russia and the Ukraine voted in favor, but abstained in later portions which told Count Folke Bernadotte, U. N. mediator, to attempt to bring Arabs and Jews together. Yakov A. Malik, successor to Andrei Gromyko of Russia on the Security Council, and Dmitri Manuilsky of the Ukraine argued that the Council and Bernadotte both lack the right to make a settlement which would alter the General Assembly partition decision of last November 29.

One paragraph, ordering the unconditional cease-fire in Jerusalem, was accepted unanimously. When Manuilsky, council president called for a vote, even El Khouri raised his hand.

Man Plunges 10 Stories to Death at YMCA

A man about 25 years old plunged to his death from a 10th-floor ledge of the YMCA, 1736 G st. nw., shortly before 9 o'clock last night.

The body, clad in white shirt and blue-gray slacks, wa found on the 18th st. side of the building after crashing through the limbs of a tree.

Police found a Hecht Department Store credit card in the man's pocket bearing the name of Gregory Tripoli, with the YMCA address. That name, however, did not appear on the YMCA register, police reported.

Although police found no witnesses, it was surmised that the man plunged from the 10th-floor ledge where several fresh cigarette butts were discovered.

Lives Staked for Democracy

Franz Neumann

Louise Schroeder

Jacob Kaiser

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Berlin, July 15.—The only bright spot for the Western World in the grim situation here is the courageous stand taken by most German leaders.

Top American officials, including Gen. Lucius D. Clay, say their firm stand against the Soviets in the Berlin siege is evidence of the strength of German democracy and proof it can succeed.

Communism unquestionably has lost heavily from Russian tactics here. Public opinion is almost solidly behind America and Britain throughout western Germany, reports received by military government officials make plain. There are indications the same is true in the Russian zone. And Berliners, in the Russian as well as other sectors, are angered by the blockade.

Col. Frank Howley, American commandant in Berlin, says his reports indicate the Russians would not receive 3 per cent of the votes if an election were held tomorrow.

The West has been wondering where democratic leaders who can lead will come from. Here is the answer. If we win out in Berlin, men and women like Ernst Reuter, Jacob Kaiser, Louise Schroeder and Franz Neumann—staking not only their careers but their lives for democracy and against communism—will be national heroes.

(Mrs. Schroeder, 60-year-old Social Democrat, was chosen temporary lord mayor of Berlin by the city council in May. Kaiser, ousted leader of the East Zone Christian Democratic Union, demarded yesterday that the Allies and Berliners show "unconditional toughness and political steadfastness" in the face of the blockade. Reuter is the elected Socialist mayor of Berlin but has not been seated because of a Soviet veto in the Kommandatura. He pledged last weekend that Germans would make the city a "German Stalingrad" to turn back the tide of Communist pressure. Neumann, chairman of the Social Democratic Party in

AEC Clears Condon for Atom Work

Study of 2 FBI Reports Leaves 'No Question Whatever,' Commission Says

The Atomic Energy Commission last night announced it had "cleared" Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards, for secret work on atomic research.

The clearance, AEC announced, came after a thorough study of his record, which "includes reports compiled in two FBI investigations."

"In a most detailed and exhaustive manner, these present a very full picture of Dr. Condon's character, associations and loyalty," the statement says, "since the FBI interviewed over 300 persons to obtain information. Its investigations were conducted by a large number of agents on a country-wide basis."

Dr. Condon, who was in New York last night, told The Washington Post by telephone:

"I have not seen the release, but from what I have been told I am very gratified to learn that the Atomic Energy Commission has made its investigation with much care and thoroughness."

Attacked by Committee

Condon was accused last spring by the House Un-American Activities Committee of being "one of the weakest links in our atomic security."

The committee charged that Condon "knowingly or unknowingly" associated with Communists and one alleged Russian spy.

The House group recommended that W. Averell Harriman, then Secretary of Commerce, either fire Condon or defend his retention as bureau chief.

The Commerce Department responded with a statement that its loyalty board had unanimously cleared the scientist of a charge of disloyalty.

Pending the result of the full investigation, upon which the Atomic Energy Commission's report yesterday was based, Condon voluntarily refrained from any activity involving secret matters.

Hearings Announced

On last June 13, Acting Chairman McDowell (R., Pa.) announced that the House committee would start hearings on the Condon case about August 1.

The AEC report last night stated that its five members had considered deferring action in the case "pending reasonably prompt action by the House committee." It then added:

"The commission considers that in view of its statutory obligations this is a case which the members of the commission should themselves decide."

"The commission has no question whatever concerning Dr. Condon's loyalty to the United States," the report said.

The report made plain that the commission had considered thoroughly charges that Condon had associated with persons of "questionable loyalty."

It stated: "The commission found that in the opinion of some persons, Dr. Condon's tact, judgment and discretion appear to be subject to some degree of criticism.

"On the other hand there are statements by persons who have been closely associated with Dr. Condon during his long work on classified information, which indicates proper care on his part in assuring that unauthorized persons

Truman's Session Call Throws Bombshell Into Campaign, Brings Torrent of Criticism

Nation Mourns 'Black Jack'

General Pershing to Lie in State at Capitol; Highest Tribute Planned at Arlington Rites

(Life Story of Gen. John J. Pershing. See Page 4)

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

General of the Armies John J. Pershing, leader of American troops in World War I and prophet of a second war with Germany, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital.

Death came peacefully at 3:50 a. m. (EDT) to the austere, 87-year-old soldier whose career spanned Indian fighting and the atomic age.

A patient at the Army hospital since 1941, "Black Jack" Pershing died of a blood clot that reached his lungs. Maj. Gen. George Beach, hospital commandant, said the underlying cause was a heart ailment.

Honored in life by the highest military rank which he shared only with George Washington, he will receive in death the utmost tribute this Nation can pay.

Soon after President Truman announced the death two hours after his return from the Democratic National Convention, plans were set afoot for a public funeral such as is reserved for the truly great.

A new generation to whom General Pershing had become history and legend, GIs of 1917, and the country's great and small will pay homage to General Pershing as they file past his bier in the Capitol rotunda Sunday and Monday. His body will lie in state at the rotunda for the public to pay its last respects from 3 p. m. to 9 p. m. Sunday and from 9 a. m. to noon Monday.

GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING

The catafalque on which General Pershing's body will lie at the Capitol is made of plain pine boards, but it has a history. Lincoln's body rested on it. One of General Pershing's men—the Unknown Soldier—used it, as did others of the Nation's famous dead.

A vast military procession will escort the body at 1 p. m. to Arlington National Cemetery Amphitheater for services. Among General Pershing's former soldiers present will be President Truman, who served as an artillery captain in combat.

Burial will be at 3 p. m. on a wooded slope of Arlington, in the midst of World War I dead. General Pershing picked that site several years ago. He explained:

"When the last bugle is sounded I want to stand up with my soldiers."

Immediately after President Truman's announcement of the death, flags were lowered to half staff in Washington and throughout the country to remain there until after the funeral. Mr. Truman called for a Nation-wide memorial observance at a time yet to be fixed.

President Truman, in his statement, declared:

"The sorrow at his passing will not be confined to his own country. Friend and foe alike have publicly paid tribute to his loyalty to duty, his ability to lead and inspire, his wisdom and courage under extreme stress. In peace, no less than in war, he retained the dignity and modest bearing characteristic of the true soldier.

"General Pershing's service in France called not only for the highest quality of military talent but also for the exercise of statesmanship of the highest order. His

'Expiring Gasp,' Vandenberg Says; Jensen Proposes Quick Adjournment

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday threw the first big bombshell into the upcoming political campaign, when he issued his formal call for a special session of the Eightieth Congress for July 26—a week from next Monday.

The almost unprecedented action of calling a special session during a campaign—the last was in 1856—brought angry criticism from Republicans everywhere.

The expressed reactions of GOP legislators and organization leaders ranged from Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg's "the last hysterical gasp of an expiring Administration" to Representative Ben Jensen's (Iowa) suggestion that Congress meet and immediately adjourn without transacting any business.

Mr. Truman was apparently in a jovial mood as he signed the proclamation. Aides said he remarked that July 26 is "turnip day" in his home county in Missouri—the best day to plant turnips to insure a good harvest.

Doesn't Detail Program

His brief, three-paragraph call declared that "the public interest requires" the session. He then added:

"I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress . . . to convene . . ."

Mr. Truman's call came only 12 hours after he announced his plans at the Democratic Convention in Philadelphia early Thursday morning. He arrived back in Washington about 4 a. m.—and, after a three-hour nap, was back at his desk at 9. Work on the proclamation began at once.

The call didn't indicate the specific tasks the President plans to put before the legislators. It merely directed them to assemble "to receive such communication as may be made by the Executive."

Unfinished Business Up

Generally it is believed Mr. Truman will bear down on legislation left unfinished by Congress in its hurry-up, 44-hour closing session just before the Republican Convention met in Philadelphia.

The Taft-Ellender-Wagner Housing bill, passed by the Senate but pigeon-holed in a House Committee; the repeal of oleomargarine taxes, passed by the House but ignored by the Senate; civil rights measures; Social Security changes to cover more types of workers; river valley power and flood control projects; Federal aid to education, and standby rationing and price controls are among the controversial measures the President is expected to touch upon.

All predictions included the spiraling-upward cost of living as among the things the President will throw into the hopper, with

Protest Strike Called Off by Italian Reds

Get-Tough Policy Of Gasperi Forces Action; Togliatti Gains

Rome, (Friday) July 16 (AP).—Italy's Communist labor leaders yielded to the goverment early today and ordered the nation-wide general strike to end at noon (6 a. m. EDT).

The decision came after the government apparently decided to get tough and break the strike that resulted from the shooting of Communist leader Palmiro Togliatti.

The prefect of Genoa Province proclaimed a state of emergency yesterday. Interior Minister Mario Scelba sent troops in armored cars to help him maintain order.

Workmen who seized factories in Turin were said to have hung out red flags over the buildings.

Sources close to the office of Premier Alcide de Gasperi said the government felt the "political strike" had lasted long enough for Togliatti's followers to blow off steam. If it continued, it was said, the government would use all means to break it—including using troops to operate trains.

The Communist-dominated General Labor Confederation, which called a general strike Wednesday, was reported far from united on it. The pro-government minority demanded an immediate end to the strike, which it called political.

Scelba's Interior Ministry had reported yesterday that the grip of the strike was loosening, with Sicilian and Neapolitan railway workers, government employes and many others joining a back-to-work movement.

Twelve persons have been killed so far in riots throughout Italy. The seventh was a baby shot through the stomach when a mob fired on a landowners' home near Bologna.

Rome police were getting tough with Communist action squads touring the city to keep stores closed. Two men were seized by

British Assert Only Force Can Halt Planes

Stand Is Announced After Soviet Press Threatens Restriction

Berlin, July 15 (AP).—The British gave notice tonight that Russian military action is the only way the Soviets can clamp down on Berlin's air corridors.

Britain's position was stated by Group Capt. H. M. Wright of the RAF at a news conference.

Asked about threats in the Russian official press to restrict travel along the three corridors, Wright said:

"I can't think of anything they could do about changing the agreed corridor rules except by military action."

When asked what would be done if the Russians announced they were cutting the number of corridors across their zone to one, Wright replied:

"We would just continue flying the same way in three corridors."

There was no immediate official American reaction to the British air expert's statement.

But in Frankfurt, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, said the Americans still are determined to stay in Berlin and will fly as many planes as possible to beat the Russian blockade.

He said more big transport craft are coming to expand the flying breadline.

Asked how long the western Allies can continue to supply Berlin by air, the general said:

"We can continue as long as the Germans in Berlin want to remain free and as long as our Government desires."

18-Year Olds May Volunteer After July 21

Forrestal Announces Date After Approval By Budget Bureau

The Army, Navy and Air Force will begin accepting special enlistments of 18-year-old volunteers under the new Draft Act next Wednesday, July 21.

Secretary of Defense Forrestal announced the date yesterday after getting Budget Bureau approval for use of the necessary funds.

Each force will accept enlistments in approximately equal monthly numbers within the limits set by the service act. These limits annually are: Army 110,000; Navy 36,000, of which 6000 is allotted to the Marines; Air Force, 15,000; total, 161,000.

The Army will accept about 10,000 enlistments during the four weeks beginning July 21; the Navy, including the Marines, 3000; the Air Force, 1300. Succeeding monthly quotas will be announced as they are determined.

Under the act, the armed forces are authorized to accept enlistments of youths of 18 and 19 who volunteer to serve one year in the regular forces followed by an extended period in the reserves.

By enlisting, the youths will be exempt from being called up in the draft.

Sen. McGrath Reelected Party Chief

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—Senator J. Howard McGrath, who engineered the nomination of President Truman by the Democratic Convention here, today was given the job of electing him in November.

Without opposition and after he declared that the Democrats can win, McGrath was reelected chairman of the National Committee for a four-year term.

McGrath told the national party leaders that if they can "keep the team together," he is confident they can elect President Truman and Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, the No. 2 man on the ticket.

Praising the personal courage and confidence of the President, the national chairman said he has "no doubt" about the national election this fall.

Some Southern States failed to send their national committeemen and committeewomen to the session but—McGrath reported this the best attended session of the top party leaders in many years.

Swept into office with McGrath were his entire staff and other national committee officials. They promised a "fighting campaign" in step with the fiery acceptance speech of Mr. Truman early today at Convention Hall.

Northern and Western Democratic leaders joined in saying that McGrath had done a fine job as national chairman. They promised to get in and fight the Republicans.

Joe L. Blythe of North Carolina reported that the party's campaign chest "is solvent and we expect to stay solvent."

He did not list any figures and

Congress Call Revives Hope For D. C. Bills

Possible Passage of Sales Tax, Pay Rise, Home Rule Seen

The President's call for a special session of Congress to begin July 26 yesterday revived hope for congressional action, and possible passage, of three major pieces of District legislation: a sales tax, a pay raise for District employes and home rule.

The sales tax and the pay raise issues are interlocked, and for the time being, deadlocked.

The last session of Congress okayed a $330 pay raise for the District's 17,000 employes, but only if the sales tax also passed. The sales tax, calling for a 2 per cent levy on retail sales combined with an income tax on incomes of $8000 and more a year, cleared the House but was blocked in the Senate by Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.).

Johnston killed the sales tax by filibuster. He has announced he favors an increase in pay for District workers, but is opposed to the sales tax on the grounds that it strikes at the "little fellow." He told reporters at the Democratic Convention in Philadelphia that he would like to see the Federal contribution to the expense of running the District government raised from the present sum of 12 million dollars annually to 25 million dollars.

This maneuver would bring into the local treasury about as much extra money as anticipated from the sales tax, but Capitol Hill observers believe there would be as much argument and controversy over a proposal to increase the Federal contribution as there has been over the sales tax.

Returning from Philadelphia yesterday, Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) and Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) urged "equality of treatment" for District employes in the matter of pay raises granted Federal workers in the last session of Congress. Robertson said he believed the President Visits Mo. Delegates At Union Station

By the United Press

President Truman went down to Union Station last night for a brief, between-trains visit with the Missouri delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

He visited with the 100-odd members, en route home from the convention, while their special cars were being shifted from one train to another.

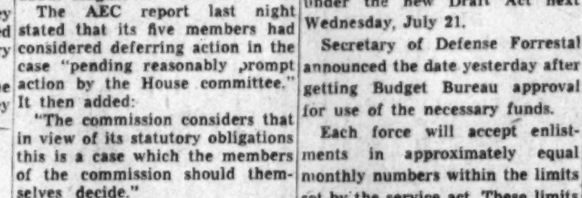
The President also posed for news pictures with Gov. Phil M. Donnelly, who put Mr. Truman's name in nomination at the convention last night, and with other members of the group.

Donnelly said the President's visit was "a nice thing for him to do—it shows he's loyal to his friends."

The delegates gave the President a rousing cheer as he left to return to the White House.

'H'ya, Pop' Starts Fatal Brawl

Father Is Slain by Stepson In Fight With 18-Inch Dagger



German dagger used in fight

A row between a father and his stepson ended yesterday in the fatal injury of the father and injuries to the stepson inflicted with a foot and a half German dagger.

Stabbed in the chest four times, the father, Eldridge N. Ford, 54, 1339 Downing st. ne., was pronounced deal on arrival at Casualty Hospital at 6:35 p. m.

The stepson, Wilfred Warner, 31, same address, a former merchant mariner, suffered two wounds, one in the left forearm, the other in the forehead during the melee.

Warner was treated at Casualty and transferred to Gallinger where he was placed in a detention room. This was done, police said, as a recent operation would not permit his being lodged in a cell. He was booked at the Twelfth Precinct as "held for action of the coroner."

Police quoted Mrs. Madeline Whittaker, a sister of Warner and an eyewitness to the fray, as saying it started when Warner greeted Ford with a "h'ya pop" when the latter returned home from his job as a mechanic at Steuart Motors, at 5:45 p. m.

Police said Mrs. Whittaker told them that Ford replied, "Mind your own —— —— business!"

An argument ensued, it was said, which was climaxed when Ford plunged the dagger, first into Warner's left arm and then into the latter's forehead.

Then, police said, quoting Mrs. Whittaker, the younger man wrested the weapon from Ford thrust it four times into his stepfather's chest.

Neighbors reported they heard screams emanating from the Ford house and one reported she heard Mrs. Whittaker cry: "Stop it, Bill! Stop it! Put down that sword!"

Meanwhile, Ford's wife, Adelaide, 66, who had been suffering from a heart ailment and who was upstairs during the struggle, was

'Dramatic' Success Reported In Chest Surgery for Asthma

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A Washington surgeon who dared to continue pioneering surgery of the chest to find a cure for intractable asthma has reported "temporary dramatic" success.

He is Dr. Brian Blades, professor of surgery at George Washington University School of Medicine and surgical chief of George Washington University Hospital.

Dr. Blades made his "preliminary report" of success in nerve surgery against asthma in an article printed in the current issue of Postgraduate Medicine, journal of the Interstate Postgraduate Medical Association of North America.

His report emphasized that the cases treated "have been followed by too short a period to predict the final outcome." In summation of four such delicate operations performed and reported on since July, 1947, he wrote "temporary dramatic relief has been obtained."

The preliminary report was made, Dr. Blades said, in the hope of reviving interest in the subject. Chest surgery involving operations on nerves has been performed

650 Employes Paid by District May Get Raises Under Ruling

Approximately 650 employes who receive pay checks from the District Government may be eligible for pay raises as a result of a Comptroller General's decision, it was revealed yesterday.

District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler disclosed that the Comptroller General had ruled 15 employes of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission eligible to receive the $350 annual increase authorized in the Federal Pay Act passed during the last session of Congress.

The Comptroller General's opinion held that, although NCPPC employes are paid with District funds, they are not under District control and hence are eligible for the Federal increase.

District officials said it is possible that the same reasoning may apply to employes of five similar agencies, but no action to grant them the wage boost will be taken unless the Comptroller General makes a specific ruling for each agency.

They include National Capital Parks (164 employes), Washington aqueduct (70 full time and approximately 200 per diem employes,) National Zoological Park (134 employes), Register of Wills

Cominform Again Denounces Tito

Called 'Half-Strike'

Back-to-Work Moves Begin In France

Paris, July 15 (U.P.).—French government bureaus were in a state of "half strike" today. Additional workers voted to leave their jobs, but a strong back-to-the-office movement developed among those who started the walkout last week.

The threat of a nation-wide tie-up of communications waned tonight as Pierre Biondi, secretary of state for civil service, promised telephone, telegraph and postal workers that their demands would be discussed by the cabinet Friday.

Leaders of the 4000-member independent PTT union announced a 24-hour delay in their strike, originally ordered for midnight tonight. Representatives of 86,000 other communicators in the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor and the non-Communist Workers' Force organization still had not decided whether to strike.

The Ministry of Finance, where the stoppage started, reported workers had come back "in important numbers." In 34 of the 88 departments affected by the strike, attendance was 100 per cent this afternoon.

Although it had been estimated that 25,000 additional employes would strike today, many of them remained at their posts while deliberating further action.

London, July 15 (AP).—The Russian-dominated Cominform denounced Marshal Tito today as a "betrayer of the working class" who rules Yugoslav Communists with a "regime of terror."

The Cominform thus renewed its battle with Tito, making its second attemp to discredit the Yugosla Premier.

The blast appears in today's issue of the Cominform Bulletin, scheduled to go on sale in Bucharest tonight. The article was transmitted by Rador, the official Romanian news agency.

Rejecting Tito's defense against the Cominform's charges of anti-Soviet nationalism, the article said the Yugoslav replies "taste of nationalist hate directed against world-wide Communist movements."

In what appeared to be its call for Yugoslav Communists to break with Tito, the Cominform declared:

"It is clear for all Marxists that the Communist Party of Yugoslavia will remain loyal to Marxism—Leninism, will weed out the plague of bourgeois nationalism and will step forward under the banner of Leninst-Stalinist internationalism on the way to the construction of socialism."

The article accused Tito and his top ministers of packing the fifth congress of the Yugaslov Communist Party, due to open Wednesday, with hand-picked delegates.

The Russian and other European Communist Parties have announced they will boycott the Belgrade congress.

Bulgarian Reds Charge Tito Broke Agreement

Sofia, Bulgaria, July 15 (U.P.).—The Bulgarian Communist Party said today that Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia and Premier Georgi Dimitrov of Bulgaria agreed secretly last year on a division of Balkan territory, creation of a separate Macedonian state and the eventual formation of a southern Slav federation.

The party newspaper published a resolution adopted by the party central committee which accused Tito of falling down on the agreements made with Dimitrov in a secret meeting at Bled, Yugoslavia.

The disclosure coincided with an official announcement that the Bulgarian Communist Party would not send a delegation to the forthcoming Yugoslav Communist Party Congress.

Albanians List 4 Provocative Acts by Greeks

London, July 15 (AP).—The Albanian Telegraphic Agency said today Greek military forces committed provocative acts against Albania four times on July 12.

The Albanian agency said in a broadcast Greek troops had fired at a motorcycle traveling on Albanian soil at the border village of Pirvicke. At about the same time, it added, a Greek plane flew over the Permeti area of Albania.

Later, the broadcast said, Greek planes flew over Albanian villages on Mount Golik and over the Kakavi region.

400 Rebel Casualties Claimed in 2 Days

Second Army Corps Headquarters, Kozane, July 15 (AP). — A Greek army spokesman said tonight the Communist rebels suffered nearly 400 casualties during a two-day battle south of Eptahorion.

The spokesman said the large number of rebels who have surrendered indicated that guerilla morale is cracking under the pressure of six Greek army divisions.

Tempers grew short in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. Government and left-wing members fought in the aisles when government deputies protested against distribution by the Communists of the Communist publication Lavoro on the floor.

Togliatti was reported improved last night. His physician's bulletin said he had begun to take nourishment.

Togliatti was hit three times by bullets fired by a Sicilian law student. The riots and strikes began promptly and were capped by the general strike call.

Truman to Entertain Cuba's New President

Havana, Cuba, July 15 (U.P.).—President-elect Carlos Prio Socarras will visit the United States late in August as the guest of President Truman, it was reported today.

(The White House announced in Washington that Prio had been invited an dthat the date of the visit and other arrangements would be disclosed later.)

War Improbable, Says British Peer

Reading, England, July 15 (AP).—Lord Strabolgi, a leading Laborite peer and one-time high British naval officer, said tonight another war is "highly improbable."

"Apart from no one wanting it—and this applies to the man in the street as well as to the leaders—there is not enough food or coal or oil in the world for a full scale war," he said in a speech.

Critics Like Modern Art Hung Upside Down

Frankfurt, Germany, July 15 (U.P.) Paul Fontaine, American artist, was pleased by the critics' praise of his abstract paintings, so he went to Wuppertal yesterday to see the exhibition himself.

He found the paintings have been hung upside down.

Weather Delays British Jet Planes

Goose Bay, Labrador, July 15 (U.P.).—Bad weather today delayed completion of the first transatlantic jet plane crossing and also prevented a squadron of 16 United States F-80 jet fighters from taking off for Germany.

Six British RAF Vampire jet planes were poised for the last leg of their east-west flight from Britain to Canada. They arrived last night after being delayed earlier in the week by weather conditions in Iceland.

U. S. to Set Up Air Bases In England, Writer Says

By Drew Pearson

Because of the tense Berlin situation, what amounts to revival of wartime American airbases will be set up in England almost immediately.

Late this week two groups of B-29s of about 30 planes each, are flying the Atlantic to reestablish active American bases in England. They will be under the command of Gen. Curtis Le May, who commanded the wartime operation of B-29s from the mid-Pacific against Japan. Le May is considered the most experienced combat commander in the Air Force.

Air Force officials, while withholding comment, admitted that the two groups of B-29s operating from England, will take no part in ferrying food to Berlin. Their function will be to "growl."

It has been an open secret for some time that in case of a showdown with Russia, American air bases would be set up in England. In fact this was discussed with the British government through diplomatic channels some months ago, and it was agreed that England would make bases available to the United States in case of a European crisis.

Sending the two groups of B-29s is interpreted as the first step to establish bases which could be used in case the United States had to withdraw other air bases from German soil.

British Troops Sent to Malaya

Singapore, July 15 (U.P.).—British troop reinforcements are being rushed from Hongkong to help stamp out Communist-inspired terrorism throughout Malaya, it was announced today.

The first battalion of Inniskilling Fusiliers is en route to Singaport, the communique said, and "will be arriving soon."

Sir Alex Newboult, acting high commissioner, admitted that security forces on hand were insufficient to cope with widespread violence.

Police rounded up more than 150 suspected guerillas in the jungles of South Johore State early today after gunmen fired on a British-Malayan patrol.

Fifty armed Chinese burned a barge carrying a rubber cargo yesterday along the east coast.

6 Japs Get 70 Years For Beheading Fliers

Yokohama, July 15 (AP).—A Japanese admiral and five other naval officers were sentenced to a total of 70 years in prison today for beheading four United States Navy fliers as a morale boosting stunt.

Sentenced to 20 years in prison was Rear Admiral Tamotsu Furukawa. Witnesses said he asked for custody of the Americans after their flying boat was forced down in the Celebes so he could execute them to boost the morale of his men.

Allies May Take Protest to Stalin

Under Allied Eyes

German Zone Heads Map Government

Frankfurt, Germany, July 15 (U.P.).—Military governors of the three western occupation zones met today to consider German-proposed changes in plans for a separate government for western Germany.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander, said the German suggestions were referred to a committee of experts which will report by the end of the week. Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, British commander, and Gen. Pierre Koenig, French commander, joined Clay in Frankfurt for the meeting.

The 11 minister-presidents of Germany turned down the Allied offer of a separate government with a constitution and asked instead for an "organizational statute."

Clay said he and the two other western military governors would meet with German officials next week after the committee of experts has reported.

Magnates Quit Part In Steel Dismantling

Dusseldorf, July 15 (U.P.).—German steel magnates notified the British military government today that they would no longer cooperate in the dismantling of German industry.

Wilhelm Saleski, secretary of the North Rhine Westphalia steel industry, said the British had been notified that all German members of the mixed dismantling committee had been advised to resign by leaders of the German steel industry. He said the chemical and heavy machine industries of northern Germany would join in the move.

Reports from Essen said members of the American steel commission and their German collaborators already have considered a plan to declare a number of Ruhr steel mills "extraterritorial." This means that German steel mills would work specifically for the Marshall Plan on raw steel imported from Sweden.

London, July 15 (U.P.).—The western Allies may take their protest against the blockade of Berlin direct to Premier Josef Stalin, well-informed sources indicated tonight.

Such a move, over the head of Soviet Foreign Minister Viacheslav Molotov, might precede an appeal to the United Nations or the World Court against Russia's attempt to force the western Allies out of Berlin.

"Stalin made the deal with us in 1945 for withdrawal of western troops from territory now occupied by Russia," the informant said. "Now Molotov as foreign minister is repudiating it.

"It would certainly be logical to carry the case to Stalin, as the Russian 'court of last resort,' before turning to other action."

A Foreign Office spokesman, commenting on Russia's refusal in notes to the United States, Britain and France to lift the blockade, said:

"It is our firm and unshakable intention to remain in Berlin."

This seemed to be the determination of all the western Allies.

Urgent consultations were held here today by the Allied "clearing house" for the Berlin crisis. Conferees were United States Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas, French Ambassador Rene Massigli and Sir William Strang, chief foreign office expert on Russia.

Today's British cabinet meeting virtually turned into an emergency session on Berlin, on the basis of a report by Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, and Bevin reported to King George at luncheon at Buckingham Palace.

'We'll Stay in Berlin,' Repeats United States

By The Associated Press

The United States restated its "We'll stay in Berlin" policy yesterday.

Press Officer Lincoln White told a news conference at the State Department that there has been no change in the United States attitude since Secretary of State Marshall said on June 30 that "we intend to stay" despite the Russian blockade of the German capital.

The reaffirmation of policy followed Russia's rejection yesterday of the western powers' demand of July 6 that the blockade be lifted.

Soviet Defied On Air Lanes

through which a day and night fleet of United States and British planes has been supplying western Berlin's two million people since the Russians pulled down the iron curtain on land traffic four weeks ago.

Americans said the Russians have notified them Soviet fighters will hold maneuvers in the corridor from five airfields.

Anxiety about the Russian refusal to lift the blockade seemed reflected in the German press. It said the Berlin city government plans to declare a state of emergency.

The threat of Russian interference with air corridor travel has been printed by the official Russian newspaper, Taegliche Rundschau. It claimed that traffic conditions in the lanes, which range up to 20 miles in width, were "intolerable." It said this situation existed because of alleged violations of safety rules and hinted that efforts would be made to reduce the number of corridors.

American fliers, flying through intermittent rain, set another record. Planes from Wiesbaden and Frankfurt brought 1530 long tons of food and supplies into the city in 24 hours.

Top Germans Show Courage

Berlin, has been outspoken in his criticism of the Communists as he was in his denouncements of National Socialists when Hitler was rising to power.—Editor's note..]

But unfortunately the issue will not be settled by democratic means and the atmosphere in Berlin was gloomy today. There is fear that war will come sooner or later, but there is more concern that we will pull out. Many feel that the effort to hang on in Berlin supplied only by air is a losing battle.

Yet American officials and newsmen here are almost unanimously of the opinion that "strategic withdrawal" from the German capital would be a disastrous body blow to United States prospects of holding western Europe against communism. Many say it would be an "American Munich." More than loss of face is involved. Policymakers here say America's pledged word is at stake.

A withdrawal in which the top leaders were evacuated would not be enough, it is said, as too many little people siding with us would suffer. Some 100,000 Berliners literally have their necks out betting on us.

After Berlin would come Vienna—an enclave with no airdrome. It could not be supported by air. Then would come pressure on western Germany, the Ruhr or elsewhere. And what support could we expect from western Germans, Frenchmen, Italians? American leaders here admit there is much logic to the argument that we are over a barrel and should cut our losses, but say withdrawal without abandonment of our whole foreign policy would be possible only after real agreement with the Russians.

The continuous road of Allied planes bringing in supplies is comforting but many Berliners ask why American troop reinforcements have not reached Europe if we mean what we say. The Russian position here is strong. They still have cards up their sleeve, can cut power and sewer connections to the western sectors and halt telephone and telegraph communications to the West.

There are new rumors of barrage balloons or other attempts to interfere with the airlift. But the main Soviet objective is not driving us from Berlin. It is defeat of the Marshall Plan and control of the Ruhr.

They are not committed to maintenance of the blockade. Officially, the railroad, canal and road channels into Berlin from the west are undergoing repair and could be announced fixed without loss of face.

Officials here look for no immediate change in the situation with blockade and air supply operations continuing pending further diplomatic maneuvers.

Gumdrop V Is Doing Fine

Mother and child — meaning Gumdrop V and her pygmy hippopotamus mother at the Zoo—are doing fine, thank you.

Gumdrop, 2 weeks old, is still a little wobbly on her feet, but her appetite is something to behold, Zoo officials said yesterday. In addition to sustenance derived from her mother, Matilda, she does away with short orders of oats and vegetables almost as fast as you can say "baby pygmy hippopotamus."

Pinkish-throated Gumdrop, whose mother was brought to the Zoo from L[illegible] in 1940 and has produced three other offspring in the past, shares honors as a new arrival with two oscillated turkeys hatched by a Chinese silky bantam chicken.

The young turkeys, born Wednesday, belong to a species found in the Yucatan Peninsula and adjacent Guatemala and British Honduras.

The species is becoming extinct, according to Zoo officials, and examples in zoos are rare.

Israeli Plane Bombs Cairo For 1st Time

Cairo, July 15 (AP).—An Israel plane bombed Cairo tonight. It was the first Jewish air attack on the big Egyptian capital.

Cairo is about 350 miles from Tel Aviv, the Israeli capital, which the Egyptians said they bombed today.

An Egyptian communique said Egyptian planes raided Tel Aviv, adding that "our heavy bombers dropped high explosives and incendiaries on objectives, causing considerable damage and fires."

The Iraqi government issued a communique in Baghdad saying its planes raided Haifa Harbor, scoring a direct hit on one of the large vessels and leaving it burning.

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli military spokesman said tonight a lull had occurred in the Palestine ground fighting. No major clashes took place on any front during the day, he said, although aretillery shelling continued.

Israel claimed her troops are poised along three sides of Nazareth, the home of Christ, and that their forces had hammered Arabs near Jerusalem.

The Holy City was bombed shortly after midnight by Egyptian planes which hit Jerusalem residential areas. It was the second raid in Jerusalem's history. Unofficial reports listed one person killed and seven injured.

U. N. Norwegian Guard Killed in Jerusalem

Lake Success, N. Y., July 15 (U.P.). A Norwegian member of the United Nations staff who volunteered for guard duty in Palestine has been killed on Mount Scopus in Jerusalem, U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie disclosed today.

The victim, first U. N. staff member to die in the conduct of a peace-keeping mission, was Ole Holge Bakke, 29.

Bakke's death at the hands of an unidentified sniper Tuesday was revealed in a telegram from Col. Nils Brunson, a Swedish colonel in charge of a detachment of 20 volunteer U. N. guards helping to protect holy places in Jerusalem.

Bakke joined the U. N. staff on his wedding day, last February 15. He and his wife resided in Brooklyn.

Gen. Pershing Dead at 87

success in retaining the essential American character of our Army abroad is known to history.

"He believed in the fundamental institutions of democracy. He saw earlier and more clearly than many of his contemporaries the development of the fast moving events which culminated in World War II."

Only one of the great leaders of World War I armies survives. Marshall Henri Petain, 92, now is in prison for life for leading the Vichy government in collaboration with Germany in World War II. Petain is to be notified of his friend's death today. Some historians credit Pershing with saving the marshall's life with a direct plea to General Charles de Gaulle.

In France where General Pershing visited the American cemeteries each year until he became critically ill in Arizona 10 years ago, President Vincent Auriol and Premier Robert Schuman prepared official statements of regret at the loss of a man who did so much to tighten the historical friendship between the two countries.

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, one of General Pershing's "boys," declared "a great soldier has passed from the American scene." Like Eisenhower, General Pershing also constantly refused nomination to the Presidency.

General of the Army George C. Marshall, another of General Pershing's "boys" and constant confidant during World War II of General Pershing, hailed his World War I commander as a gallant soldier who "represented to every American officer and man perfection in soldiering qualities, dynamic leadership and American patriotism."

"A great soldier, devoid of political and personal ambitions, he served his country to a greater degree than most of our citizens realize," said Secretary Marshall.

"His influence went far toward shaping the destinies of our armies in the great wars, and we salute him for the last time with pride in his great achievements and with deep appreciation for his vast contribution to the Nation. May the people of this country honor his memory by a careful regard for the principles for which he stood."

Eulogies came from Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, a post Pershing held from 1921 to 1924; Defense Secretary James Forrestal, Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall, Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, and others.

Pershing's home town of Laclede, Mo., where he was born September 13, 1860, prepared to hold memorial services. Near the town is the 1770-acre Pershing State Park and the swimming hole Pershing used. After his return from France, Pershing declined invitations from other cities and announced: "I am going home to Laclede."

His son, Warren Pershing, and the general's sister, Miss May Pershing, were at his bedside when he died yesterday.

His wife and three daughters were killed in a fire that swept their home at the Presidio in San Francisco in 1915.

Band Pershing Founded To Accompany Cortege

The United States Army Band, founded by General Pershing in 1922, will accompany his body to its last resting place in Arlington Cemetery Monday.

As another mark of respect to its founder, the band has canceled its scheduled concert tonight on the steps of the Capitol.

After the general went to Walter Reed Hospital, the band visited there annually on his birthday to serenade him.

Pershing Died on Hour Men Stopped Germans

Just 30 years from the hour of General Pershing's death, American troops under his command in the Champagne sector caught the brunt of the German army's last great offensive of that war. The Germans were stopped with heavy losses in their fight for Paris.

Just 30 years ago from the day General Pershing is to be buried, the American and Allied armies launched their counter-offensive and retained the initiative until the war's end.

Pershing, a Trail Breaker, Always Stirred Controversy

Took World War I Out of Trenches For Speedy Finish

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

When John J. Pershing strode onto the international stage in 1917 his tall, commanding figure already was well known to his fellow countrymen. Nor was he by any means a stranger to the people among whom he was to represent America.

For years the winds of controversy had blown about him, bitterly and strong. For that matter, controversy was to pursue him throughout his command of the AEF and afterward, even when he had retired to Walter Reed Hospital, unable to cope longer with the burden of his years. It was one of the many contradictions in the long career of this soldier that he abhorred controversy above all things.

Pershing went to France in May, 1917, fresh from his punitive expedition into Mexico in unsuccessful pursuit of the bandit Pancho Villa. While the operation had been conducted in soldierly fashion against insuperable difficulties of diplomacy, politics, logistics and maneuver, it had not escaped criticism back home. It had not caught Villa; a United States detachment had been roughly handled by townspeople at Parral and two troops of cavalry had been ambushed and wiped out at Carrizal. The people wanted results and not excuses.

Pershing offered none. He sailed from New York May 29 on the Baltic, and 10 days later landed at Liverpool. Then on June 13, he and his staff stepped ashore at St. Nazaire, the advance guard of the powerful American Expeditionary Force of 2½ million men which was to turn the tide of war and force an armistice within 17 months.

Not only did Pershing command the greatest army in numbers of men placed under an American officer; his task had few precedents in this Nation's military history. Pershing's army was the first which had supplied itself over 3000 miles of seaborne communications. It was the first which had depended altogether on seaborne communications against an enemy which had the means of interrupting them. It was the first which had moved into a ready-made war, a war whose pattern had been shaped by three years of desperate and incredibly bloody fighting.

On top of those difficulties were piled the almost shattered morale of the European Allies, particularly the French and Italians, their war-weariness and their jealousies. Clearly the United States needed at the head of its overseas army not only a soldier but a diplomat.

Irritant to Allies

Perhaps there were other officers high in the army command at that time who would have met these difficulties and their recurring crises as ably as Pershing did. Fortunately for the country and for the Allied cause, it did not become necessary to answer this question through some process of trial and error; the right man had been chosen at the outset.

Pershing went to France with the admonition from Secretary of War Newton D. Baker that the identity of the American Army must be preserved, an admonition which resulted from many conferences between Baker and himself, compliance with which was to involve Pershing in his bitterest controversy of all. Upon his allies, schooled in position warfare, sure of the correctness and effectiveness of their way of doing things, Pershing must have acted as an irritant from the first.

Unhampered by the considerations which bound the thinking of his confederates, he brought a fresh and lively viewpoint to the Western Front bogged down in the mud of its own trenches. All his teaching and experience had been in open warfare and all his common sense told him the Allies would never win the war until they got out of their trenches and gave themselves room for maneuver. He knew also that success would evade the Allies until they agreed on a single commander in the West.

So Pershing bombarded his own War Department with demands that infantry destined for his command be taught rifle marksmanship and be schooled in open warfare as a first consideration, and trained his own people in open warfare despite the raised eyebrows of his French and British colleagues. The Germans assisted him in his one-man campaign.

The great Ludendorff offensive of March, 1918, rocked the Allies back on their heels and forced agreement on Marshal Ferdinand Foch as supreme commander of the Allied armies. Open warfare was to follow and to end the war less than three months after the troops left their trenches.

But in the meantime the tremendous job of organizing an American force in France and fitting it into the Allied war effort weighed heavily on Pershing's broad shoulders. Not only had French port facilities to be vastly enlarged, but great depots had to be built and maintained and the overtaxed French railway system had to be augmented to care for its increased burden of traffic. All these things the United States commander carried out while wrestling with an unique and provoking difficulty.

Backed by Wilson

Pershing's insistence on maintaining the growing American Expeditionary Force intact, preserving its integrity and committing it to battle as an American Army, brought him into blazing conflict with the French and British. These allies demanded that the American infantry then arriving in France be sent to French and British units as casual replacements to fill the gaps created by the wasteful policy of attrition pursued throughout the previous three years. Pershing refused thus to place American soldiers in foreign armies and stuck to his refusal through a campaign of intense pressure and bitter vilification during which President Wilson was importuned by British and French politicians to recall him from command.

President Wilson and Secretary Baker backed Pershing to the limit, sustained his refusal to destroy the American Army, and kept him in command. The result was Belleau Wood, Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, the Meuse-Argonne and victory.

Bitter and dangerous as this controversy was, it was not revealed until Pershing told of it himself in his memoirs in 1932. There were other controversies, though, to which the whole world was privy. One of these raged briefly about the failure to give Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood a command in France.

Dispute With March

Wood, popular and politically influential, was sent to France as a division commander to familiarize himself with the situation there before leading his division over. Upon his return to the United States, Wood resumed command of his division but was transferred to another when it left for France. The reason was Pershing's insistence to Baker that Wood was "insubordinate," a "meddling political general," and because he was lame as the result of an old accident, "the sight of a lame man like this going about our Allied armies posing as 'America's greatest' must have been anything but inspiring to our Allies."

Still another controversy which troubled Pershing throughout his command of the AEF but was not exposed until many years after, was that between him and Gen. Peyton C. March, War Department Chief of Staff. March had gone to France to command the First Field Artillery Brigade and had been given command of the artillery of the First Army. After slightly more than six months in France, March was called back to Washington to be Chief of Staff. He had hardly settled himself in his office here before he and Pershing became involved in controversy which endured many years after the war.

The root of this disagreement was simply a difference in interpretation of the functions of the Chief of Staff and his relations to the field commander. Pershing felt that March's function was to train troops and procure supplies and forward both to the combat theater as called for. March felt that his function was to command the entire army and direct its employment and that Pershing thus was subordinate to him and under his control. Pershing referred to this difference in his memoirs and in 1932 March wrote a book about his own part in the war in which Pershing was handled so roughly as to bring much criticism on the author.

Nor was Pershing's own personality untouched by controversy. Tall, handsome, powerfully built and altogether one of the most soldierly commanders an American army ever had, Pershing still did not inspire the affection he truly wanted among the men he led. They thought him cold, too formal, too harsh in his discipline and generally inconsiderate of their comfort — reactions for which Pershing himself was not altogether responsible.

But the real affection he was capable of arousing in men displayed itself for more than 60 years among his West Point classmates. He was the first president elected by the class of 1886 and he was the class's only president. Every year after that, wherever he was, whatever he was doing, obscure lieutenant or famous general, he was reelected by the men who knew him best.

Always dispassionate, austere, firm, hard and impersonal in his dealings with people, these traits undoubtedly were intensified in Pershing by an overwhelming tragedy which overtook him in 1915. On August 27, while he was camped on the uneasy Mexican border, his quarters at the Presidio of San Francisco burned and his wife and their three daughters perished. Only his son Warren survived, rescued by a nurse.

Yet after his retirement, Pershing's former soldiers developed genuine affection for him, that of many officers who were close to him in the AEF being almost filial in its intensity. To the end, Gen. George C. Marshall paid regular visits to his old commander and during the Second World War often sought his counsel.

Appraisal of Pershing's contribution to his country through his long life is apt to be focused too narrowly upon his leadership of the AEF. While that, and particularly his inflexibility about destruction of the American Army, was his outstanding achievement, others less widely known have left their stamp forever on the United States Army. It would not be too much to say that Pershing's foresight made possible the swift and successful expansion of the Army in the early part of World War II.

At the outset, Pershing developed for the AEF and its units a staff system modeled chiefly on the German and very like that of today and with which World War II was fought. Between the end of the first war and his retirement in 1924, he fostered the system of professional schools which made possible the wholesale training of officers to lead the armies to victory in 1942-45. And his own driving energy, more than any other single factor, sold to Congress and the arthritic old War Department the National Defense Act of 1920 which established the framework upon which the great army of World War II was built.

In one thing Pershing's advice went unheeded, at inexcusable cost to the world. He insisted, when the defeat of Imperial Germany was clearly inevitable, that the beaten foe be pursued into his homeland and relentlessly hammered into unconditional surrender. He knew, as the world was to learn, that to be final, victory must be complete.

Soldier by Chance

Born in and for war, Pershing became a soldier by merest chance and then almost abandoned the Army for the law because he conceived little opportunity for a soldier in the peaceful years he thought he saw ahead. As it was, the greater part of his 40 active years as a soldier were spent in wars, campaigns and skirmishes of his own army or those of other nations.

John Joseph Pershing was born near Laclede, Mo., September 13, 1860, first of nine children born to John Fletcher Pershing, a farmer and railway section foreman. The place of his birth was little more than a shanty beside the 7-mile stretch of track maintained by his father's gang.

Between the boy born that day on the eve of the great American Civil War and the land where he himself was to lead an American army to victory 58 years later stretched a close tie of kinship. The first Pershing ancestor to reach America was Frederick Pfoerschin who emigrated in 1724 from Alsace, which his descendant did so much to restore to France. In Pennsylvania, where Frederick Pfoerschin settled, the name became first Pershin and eventually Pershing.

John J. Pershing's father was Frederick Pfoerschin's grandson, his father having been a Methodist minister, fourth son of Frederick. John Fletcher Pershing went to Missouri in early manhood, married Ann Elizabeth Thompson, a Kentuckian, and settled down to the task of rearing his numerous brood by his work for the railroad, storekeeping, operating a hotel and other enterprises.

Taught School as Youth

Young Pershing's first five years were spent in the atmosphere of border warfare, filled with raids and alarms of raids by the Quantrell and other guerilla gangs which harried the border. At 12 he joined the Methodist Church, which he left in later years to become a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

When he was only 17, the modest fortune his father had accumulated was wiped out by a crash in land values, and Pershing began teaching a small Negro school. Later he took a teaching post at a district school 9 miles from his home and, with his savings from these jobs, attended Kirksville Normal where he was graduated with an A. B. in 1880.

He had decided to study law but in 1882 his attention was caught by a newspaper account of pending competitive examinations for appointment to the Military Academy at West Point. Since this seemed an excellent way for a poor young man to get a fine education, he took the examination and won the appointment.

At West Point, which he entered at 22, he was considerably older than most other cadets, a fact which no doubt contributed to the reputation for austerity and aloofness which attached itself to him even then. His record there was curiously like that at the Virginia Military Institute of George C. Marshall, who was to become very close to him in the First World War and to attain the Nation's highest military office in the second.

Like Marshall at V. M. I., Pershing stood only moderately well in his academic studies, but in military life was outstanding. Just as Marshall was to do in another school some 10 years later, Pershing was first corporal in his second year, first sergeant of the first company in this third, and first captain of the corps of cadets in his last.

Graduating in 1886, he chose the cavalry as his arm and was assigned to the Sixth Cavalry then campaigning against the Apaches in New Mexico. After five years of sporadic Indian fighting with the Sixth, he was assigned as military instructor at the University of Nebraska. While there he studied law and received his LL.B. in 1893.

ON HIS 81ST BIRTHDAY
General Pershing waved his cane at photographers at Walter Reed and, in mock seriousness, said, "Don't crowd me or I'll use my cane"

In 1895 he was assigned to the Tenth Cavalry, a Negro regiment, and when he was detailed to West Point as an instructor a year later, the cadets labelled him "Black Jack" because of his previous assignment. He left West Point in 1898 when, at his own request, he was reassigned to the Tenth for service in Cuba in the Spanish War. After fighting with his regiment at El Caney and San Juan Hill, he organized the Insular Bureau in the War Department and then entered upon the assignment which was to bring him exceptional acclaim and involve him in his first great controversy.

In 1899 Pershing, now a 39-year-old captain, was ordered to the Philippines to the Fifteenth Cavalry, then fighting the fierce Moro tribesmen. So efficiently did he go about the subjugation of the Sultan of Bacalan and so complete was his success that he won national recognition as a soldier. Greater results were to come.

In a message to Congress December 7, 1903, President Theodore Roosevelt nominated Pershing for promotion from captain to brigadier general, which would have jumped him over the heads of 862 captains, majors, lieutenant colonels and colonels. It was not an unprecedented move; three such promotions already had been made and another was to go through in 1904.

Pershing's confirmation languished, however, despite Roosevelt's efforts, until September 20, 1906, when he was confirmed as a brigadier general by the Senate. Meanwhile, on January 26, 1905, he had married Helen Frances Warren, daughter of Chairman Francis B. Warren (R., Wyo.), of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. His confirmation the following year gave rise to immediate charges that only his father-in-law's position made it possible.

But Roosevelt had been pushing for confirmation vigorously for three years, and he answered all these cries of political favoritism in typical Rough Rider fashion:

"To make a man a brigadier general because his father-in-law was a United States Senator would be an infamy. But to decline to make him a brigadier general for that reason would be greater infamy."

It was as a brigadier general, then, and a bridegroom that he returned to the Philippines in 1906 after honeymooning briefly in Tokyo, where he had been Military Attache, and from where he had gone to the Russo-Japanese War in 1905 as an observer. His second tour of the Philippines as governor of the Moro Province lasted seven years and included subjugation of the last stubborn remnants of the warlike Moros. In conquering them he had so won their admiration and esteem that they made him a Moro datu, with the power of life and death over his subjects, and a tribal judge.

In 1914 Pershing returned to the United States, and soon was on the Mexican border, guarding it against raids from bandits and revolutionary generals, between whom there was small room for distinction. He was on this duty when his wife and daughters died in the tragedy at the Presidio. Pershing never married again, and those who knew him best said his devotion to Frances Warren made a second marriage impossible for him.

While on his expedition after Villa with 10,000 troops Pershing was promoted to major general and, upon the death of Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston in 1917, was given command of the Southern Department of the Army. He was in this office when war was declared on Germany April 6, 1917.

On May 2 he was directed to assemble a force of four infantry regiments and one field artillery regiment for service in France, and eight days later was summoned to Washington and given command of the American effort in France. That was the nucleus of the AEF and the genesis of Pershing's ultimate supreme command.

Immediately a great outcry arose. Theodore Roosevelt was clamoring for field command and had many powerful backers. Leonard Wood, senior major general and former Chief of Staff, expected the assignment and was strongly supported for it, especially within the Army.

But Secretary Baker had chosen Pershing. There is no cause to doubt that he chose him as the most promising officer available, and for no other reason. He had never met Pershing, but he knew his record and he knew that Pershing was well known to the public as a result of his Mexican expedition. Pershing was the logical and fortunate choice.

In 1919 Congress made Pershing General of the Armies first officer to hold that rank since George Washington. After his retirement as Chief of Staff in 1924, he gave most of the remaining active years of his life to the work of the American Battle Monuments Commission, visiting France yearly until 1940 to supervise maintenance of United States military cemeteries. In 1925 he reluctantly accepted chairmanship of the plebiscite commission which undertook to settle the Tacna-Arica territorial dispute between Peru and Chile.

Mentioned for Presidency

Pershing was, of course, mentioned for the Presidency. In the campaigns of 1920, 1924 and 1928 strong Pershing movements were begun, but as often he halted them, a course at which he later rejoiced.

Despite encroaching age the old soldier continued active with his annual pilgrimages to France, meetings with his Army friends, and occasional official functions. But a country concerned with the Great Depression, social significance and peace at any price had almost forgotten the old warrior when a note of high personal drama put his name once more on every lip in America.

Vacationing at Tuscon, Ariz., with his sister in February, 1938, he became ill and on Washington's Birthday developed complications so serious that his death was momentarily expected. A funeral train was prepared to convey his body to Washington, veterans' and patriotic organizations, Government officials and high Army officers prepared eulogistic statements to be held for release upon his death. But Pershing refused to die.

He was 78 and had lived strenuously all his life. But lying on his bed at Tuscon he fought death as he had fought Apaches, Spaniards, Mexicans, Moros and Germans; the indomitable will which had refused to turn his growing army over to the Allies as replacements proved as stubborn in 1938 as it had 20 years before. Pershing conquered his illness, to the amazement and delight of his countrymen. The eulogies were never released, the funeral train was replaced by a special car which brought him to Washington for the wedding in May of his son Warren.

Though he never fully regained his strength, he made his last pilgrimage to France in 1939 and upon his return to New York shook his cane and barked at news photographers with much of the old Pershing fire. That same year and the next, he urged rearmament to meet the threat from Germany he had foreseen in November, 1918. He conferred frequently with his former aide, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army.

It has been many years since he visited the office maintained for him in the old State Department Building, and he never knew his small staff had been moved out of it in 1947 to make room for the Citizens Emergency Food Committee. He spent the last years of his life at Walter Reed, talking with old friends who occasionally visited him, reading from his library, and no doubt looking back down the years which his own ability and strength of character had made so full and useful.

Of all the summits he had reached in those years, and there were many, perhaps he remembered most that terrible March 28, 1918, when the great Ludendorff offensive threatened Paris and Amiens and had torn a precarious gap between the French and the British. Pershing went to Marshal Foch, put aside all he had been striving for in holding his army together, and offered it to the French however they wanted to use it.

"I have come to say to you," he told Foch, "that the American people would hold it a great honor for our troops were they engaged in the present battle. I ask it of you in my name and that of the American people.

"There is at this moment no other question than that of fighting. Infantry, artillery, aviation—all that we have — are yours to dispose of as you will . . . I have come to say to you that the American people would be proud to be engaged in the greatest battle of history."

Before Foch decided what use to make of this self-effacing offer, the German offensive burned itself out with a half-million casualties. When it flared again, Pershing had his big divisions in hand and, integrated into French Army Corps, they turned the tide at Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Wood and in the Champagne.

Lee Wiggins Resigns Post at Treasury

A. Lee M. Wiggins has resigned as Undersecretary of the Treasury to become chairman of the board of both the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville & Nashville Railroads.

Treasury Secretary Snyder said yesterday that President Truman has accepted the resignation Wiggins tendered the White House in a letter dated July 9.

Snyder said Mr. Truman has named Edward H. Foley, jr., 43-year-old New Yorker, to succeed Wiggins. Foley has been Assistant Secretary for two years and has been in Government service since 1932.

John S. Graham, 43, a Winston-Salem, N. C., lawyer, will succeed Foley as Assistant Secretary. Graham has been executive assistant to Wiggins since Wiggins became Undersecretary early in 1947.

The appointments of Foley and Graham require Senate confirmation. Presumably, Mr. Truman will send their nominations to the Senate for approval during the special session of Congress beginning July 26.

Snyder expressed regret over the departure of Wiggins. He said Wiggins will "continue his relationship with the Treasury by serving as special assistant to the Secretary." He will head a committee to direct studies on management of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Wiggins, 57, will undertake his new duties with the two railroads September 1. His election as board chairman for the two lines was announced in New York today. He has served as a director of the ACL.

A native of Durham, N. C., Wiggins became a Hartsville, S. C., banker-businessman.

Text of AEC Memorandum on Condon

The text of the Atomic Energy Commission's memorandum on its decision regarding the loyalty of Dr. Edward U. Condon follows:

THE question before the commission is the security clearance of Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards. In view of Dr. Condon's past association with the atomic energy project, this question arises under the provisions of the Atomic Energy Act for reinvestigations of persons who were permitted access to restricted data by the Manhattan district. The question presented is whether Dr. Condon's clearance should be continued to permit him to have access to the restricted data pertinent to his duties as director of the Bureau of Standards and related activities.

After examining the extensive files in this case, the commission has no question whatever concerning Dr. Condon's loyalty to the United States. What we have for consideration, therefore, is whether the continued clearance of this distinguished American scientist, whose loyalty is unquestionable, would constitute a security hazard to the atomic energy program. Such a decision calls for a commonsense evaluation of the factors involved.

In considering the case, the commission has taken note of the prior association of Dr. Condon with the atomic energy program; during which he was given access to information of a high degree of secrecy:

1. In 1940, Dr. Condon was appointed a member of the eight-man uranium subcommittee of the uranium section, National Defense Research Committee, which carried out the first over-all survey of problems related to developing nuclear energy from atomic fission for the defense program.

2. In 1941 and 1942, Dr. Condon served as associate director of research of the Westinghouse Corp., during the period when Westinghouse took a prominent part in the production of the first substantial quantities of pure uranium metal.

3. Also in 1942, Dr. Condon was appointed a consultant to S-1 executive committee of the Office of Scientific Research and Development. This committee was charged with the responsibility for reviewing the basic program of the entire uranium project.

4. For a short period in 1943, Dr. Condon served as associate director of the Los Alamos Laboratory, at that time in the early stages of its organization as the unit of the Manhattan project which would finally turn out atomic bombs. While at Los Alamos he prepared a document known as the "Los Alamos Primer," which was used as an introduction to the subject of the explosive use of fissionable material, to introduce to scientific and technical personnel coming to the laboratory the fundamental ideas under investigation.

5. In 1944-45, Dr. Condon worked at the radiation laboratory of the University of California at Berkeley, which was under contract with the Manhattan District.

6. In November, 1945, Dr. Condon, having been appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, took office in the position which he now occupies as director of the National Bureau of Standards.

7. In December, 1945, Dr. Condon was designated and thereafter served as scientific adviser to the Senate's Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

8. In 1946, Dr. Condon was named by the President as a member of the Evaluation Commission for Operations Crossroads, and in this capacity attended the Bikini tests.

DURING the war the Bureau of Standards conducted for the atomic energy program of the Manhattan District certain work of types which the bureau was particularly suited to perform. The bureau has continued to perform for the Atomic Energy Commission similar work which can be best carried out by the bureau. Thus in his position as director of the Bureau of Standards, and in other related atomic energy activities in which he would participate, Dr. Condon has need for access to certain types of restricted data.

This meant that under the Atomic Energy Act Dr. Condon's security clearance required "reinvestigation;" that is, it was necessary for the FBI to investigate and report to the commission on his character, associations and loyalty, and for the commission then to determine whether permitting him to have access to restricted data will endanger the common defense and security.

In defining the question before the commission, it is recognized that, as is the case with thousands of other persons whose security clearances must be passed on by the commission, Dr. Condon's clearance does not involve access to information on weapons or production or stockpile data, for the reason that his duties do not require that such access be given.

The five members of the Atomic Energy Commission have personally examined with care the entire record. Although its Personnel Security Review Board expressed the opinion on June 7, 1948, that action by the commission on the case might appropriately be deferred, pending reasonably prompt action by the House Committee on un-American Activities with respect to that committee's own investigation and hearing as to Dr. Condon, the commission considers that in view of its statutory obligations this is a case which the members of the commission should themselves decide, and that it is our duty to proceed at this time to such a decision.

The record before the commission includes reports compiled in two FBI investigations. In a most detailed and exhaustive manner, these present a very full picture of Dr. Condon's character, associations and loyalty, since the FBI interviewed over 300 persons to obtain information and its investigations were conducted by a large number of agents on a country-wide basis.

In addition, the FBI supplied the commission the pertinent information relating to Dr. Condon which it had obtained from the files of other Government agencies. The thorough and painstaking investigations by the FBI, and other relevant information available to the commission, provide the basis on which it is the commission's responsibility to determine the question of Dr. Condon's security clearance.

IN CONSIDERING the record, the commission has found that, in the opinion of some persons, Dr. Condon's tact, judgment and discretion appear to be subject to some degree of criticism. On the other hand, there are statements by persons who have been closely associated with Dr. Condon during his long work on classified information, which indicate proper care on his part in assuring that unauthorized persons should not obtain access to classified information.

The file contains unfavorable information of a relevant character concerning certain persons with whom Dr. Condon and Mrs. Condon have from time to time had contacts. The file also shows that Dr. Condon is a man of wide associations, and that his associates include many highly reputable members of the scientific community who have great confidence in him.

In deciding such matters, the commission has a statutory responsibility to place in perspective the evidence both favorable and unfavorable, and to decide whether the common defense and security of the United States would be adversely affected if the individual concerned continued to have that access to restricted data which is required by the nature of his duties.

On the basis of the voluminous record before it, the members of the commission are fully satisfied that, in the terms of the statute, Dr. Condon's continued clearance for the purposes stated above "will not adversely affect the common defense and security" of the United States. The commission considers that his continued clearance is in the best interests of the atomic energy program.

Union Authorizes Strike at Ford Plant

Detroit, July 15 (AP).—Representatives of 116,000 Ford Motor Co. workers today unanimously authorized the United Auto Workers (CIO) to call a strike against the big automotive firm.

Rejecting Ford's "final" offer of a 13-cent hourly pay raise, the National Ford Council demanded that Ken Bannon, national Ford director, set a date for the walkout.

Bannon was expected to delay any action until after Monday, when the union's executive board meets. A strike would have to be approved by the international union before a walkout could actually begin.

Ford made what it called its "final offer" last night. Its terms included a flat 13-cent raise and several other benefits.

The bargaining sessions, which have lasted a month, were then immediately halted. No further sessions were scheduled at today's union meeting for the next few days.

The union charged Ford with "breaking off" the talks, but the company has insisted it is ready to resume them at any time.

Strike action already has been voted by several of the company's 46 plants scattered around the country. Sunday the biggest of them all, the Rouge plant's Ford Local 600, votes on the issue.

The union, which started out with a demand of a 14-cent raise coupled with another 14 cents in fringe demands, has reportedly scaled its stand "considerably."

While neither side would reveal the exact nature of the latest UAW demand, reports were that it reached a total of about 21 cents.

Ford's current average wage for production workers is $1.52 an hour.

U. S. Steel and CIO Union Reported Near Agreement

Pittsburgh, July 15 (AP)—Reports were persistent tonight that U. S. Steel Corp. and the CIO United Steelworkers have reached an accord on wage increases for nearly 300,000 employes.

Although steel spokesmen had no comment and Philip Murray, president of both the CIO and the Steelworkers, said only that a statement would be forthcoming tomorrow it was believed the union's wage policy committee would approve the reported agreement.

It has been reported persistently that "Big Steel" would increase its wages eight to 13 per cent, working out to the equivalent of about 12½ cents an hour for steelworkers now paid an average of $1.55 hourly.

Typographical Union Rejects Latest Offer

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—The Chicago Typographical Union, on strike since November 24 against the city's major newspapers, today rejected what it termed "the capricous arbitration offer of the publishers."

John J. Pilch, president of the union, an affiliate of the International Typographical Union, said in a letter to the Publishers' Association that the union position "will stand for unlimited duration."

Stereotypers Vote To Strike in Cincinnati

Cincinnati, July 15 (AP).—Daniel J. Lehan, president of Cincinnati Sterotypers Union No. 5 (AFL), announced today that members of that craft employed by the three local newspapers have voted to strike.

W. A. Ahrens, executive secretary of the Cincinnati Daily Newspaper Publishers Association, said the sterotypers have asked an increase of $11 weekly for a 37½-hour work week.

The present scale is $79 for a 37½-hour work week for day employes and $84 for those on night shifts.

'Skunk Oil' Squirted On Workers by Pickets

Dayton, Ohio, July 15 (U.P.)—Pickets on duty at struck plants had a new one today—"skunk oil."

Ten non-striking employes at the Univis Lens Co. here were sprayed today with an odorous liquid as they passed through a United Electric Workers picket line.

Roy Marks, vice president of the company, told police in registering a complaint that it was "skunk oil," but a hospital physician who helped deodorize the victims said it was sulphur monoxide.

W. Va. Rushes Police to Struck Plant

Charleston, W. Va., July 15 (AP). State police reinforcements from throughout West Virginia were rushed here today after Sheriff E. D. Brawley reported "I cannot cope with the situation" at the struck du Pont ammonia plant.

Picket line clashes the past two days have resulted in injuries to nine persons.

"We are just not going to stand for violence or disorder," State Police Superintendent W. E. Burchett said.

"We are going to have enough State police in to protect life and property."

The point at issue is whether the United Mine Workers District 50, John L. Lewis' catch-all unit for workers outside the mining industry, still represents the plant's workers.

duPont attorneys went back to court today seeking measures to enforce a court injunction granted yesterday which limits UMW pickets to two at each gate.

Deputy Sheriff E. C. Guthrie told the court it would have been suicide to try and enforce the order.

"This court will see that citizens can freely come and freely go on the highways and to and from their work," Judge William T. O. Farrell declared.

"The court will assume from now on that the contents of this injunction will be carried out."

The duPont management said it was maintaining production and reported 2500 employes have stayed inside the plant to avoid running the picket lines.

State troopers also were patrolling the plant, which is about 10 miles southeast of Charleston.

But hundreds of demonstrators, many wearing the hard hats of miners, kept up a constant uproar along the highway and a railroad track opposite the plant.

The strike was called Monday after UMW had declined to submit the validity of its wage contract to an impartial referee.

A National Labor Relations Board election was held at the plant recently when a CIO chemical workers union sought recognition as bargaining agent.

District 50 could not appear on the ballot because its officers have not filed the non-Communist affidavits required by the Taft-Hartley law. UMW leaders campaigned for a "no-union" vote and the CIO union was defeated by 65 ballots.

The company contended this ended District 50's contract, which covered about 4000 of the 4800 employes and still had some time to run.

The picket line demonstrations started Tuesday night. Three men were arrested on disorderly conduct charges.

4 New Polio Cases Reported in Area

Four new cases of poliomyelitis were reported in Greater Washington yesterday.

Two of the victims were sisters, aged 3 and 4, of North Arlington. The third was a 23-year-old woman of the 4000 block of Edmonds st. nw., and the fourth a 5 year-old Bladensburg (Md.) boy. They brought the year's total for the area thus far to 11, compared to 7 for this time last year.

Mrs. George A. DuKate, of 1120 N. Kensington st., Arlington, said one daughter, Sheron, 4, was admitted to Children's Hospital about 2:30 p. m. Wednesday. The other, Wanda, 3, was admitted less than five hours later. Tests for polio on both were positive, she said.

Serious Type

Although Children's Hospital officials would not announce a final diagnosis on the DuKate children, Mrs. DuKate said physicians there told her the sisters had the bulbar type of polio, a serious form of the disease. Mrs. DuKate's husband is an accountant with Riddell Realty Co., 1742 K st. nw.

She pointed out, for its possible value to health officials, that children in the neighborhood frequently play near an incinerator in the apartment development. She said the incinerator is no longer used to burn trash, but as a storage place for old newspapers and refrigerators and a place to wash out garbage cans.

Rats in Apartment

About two months ago, before the incinerator was abandoned as an incinerator, the apartments had rats, Mrs. DuKate said. She said she saw one of them on her second floor landing. The rodents were promptly exterminated, she added.

Sheron, the older of the DuKates' two children, had a temperature of 102 and a headache a week ago yesterday. The family physician noted a slightly sore throat, and Sheron's temperature returned to normal that day. Well enough to go out, she seemed to be abnormally inactive, sitting around near the house most of the time. Monday night, she began gagging, and when her temperature rose to 100.6 Wednesday morning, with the gagging worse, Mrs. DuKate again called the doctor.

The younger child, Wanda, began vomiting as her mother was having Sheron admitted to the hospital Wednesday afternoon. Wanda had a temperature of 104 last Friday, but soon returned to normal.

SHERON DuKATE

WANDA DuKATE

The DuKate children have not left the neighborhood since a month ago when they visited Mrs. DuKate's sister, Mrs. Blanche Preston, at 52 Madison st. nw.

The District polio victim reported yesterday was admitted to Gallinger Hospital and her case reported to the Health Department yesterday.

The Bladensburg boy, a mild case, was discharged from Children's Hospital yesterday after five days' hospitalization. His parents, hospital officials said, intend to isolate the child at home.

Nationally, the number of polio victims has been swelled in recent weeks by outbreaks in North Carolina, Texas and California. There were 2367 cases over the Nation through July 3, with 1201 for the same period a year ago. North Carolina alone had 608 cases up to yesterday, most of them reported in the last few weeks.

Work was being rushed day and night on an emergency hospital at Greensboro, N. C.

At Wilmington, Del., yesterday, the board of health ordered the city's five swimming pools closed as a precautionary measure against an epidemic. The city had 16 cases under treatment and 9 others under observation.

U. S. Health Service to Open Exhibit in Bethesda Today

United States Public Health Service is opening most all its doors tonight at its National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md., to show its workings to the public.

Sole exhibit exception will be the Memorial Laboratory, three-story structure especially designed and operated for research on dangerous infectious diseases. The building will be closed to the public.

The open-house program commemorates the 150th anniversary of the start of Public Health Service. That was on July 16, 1798, when the second President of the United States, John Adams, signed an act creating Marine Hospital Service for relief of sick and disabled seamen. Today, as Public Health Service, the quasi-military arm has a staff of more than 1400 persons, including some of the Nation's most outstanding scientists.

Public visiting hours tonight will be between 7:30 and 10 p. m. Personnel of Public Health Service have been invited to inspect the research branch of their organization between 2:30 and 5 p. m.

Preparing for the occasion, the institutes have set up special displays of their scientific activities and have arranged for the presentation of numerous demonstrations of techniques used to fight diseases.

These will include:

Division of tropical diseases: Demonstrations of snails and their role in transmission of human disease, schistosmiasis, Dr. Eloise B. Cram; demonstration of the Geiger Mueller counter tracing radioactive antimony in tissue, Dr. Frederick J. Brady; exhibit of living insects which transmit disease, including ticks, bedbugs, fleas, and kissing bugs, Dr. Paul A. Woke.

Malarial Chemotherapy Section: Mosquito breeding malaria, Miss Helen Louise Trembley; test of antimalarial drugs in chicks, Dr. Edward S. Josephson; testing same in man, Dr. W. Clark Cooper.

Biologics Control Laboratory: demonstrations of freezing and drying cultures, Dr. Hornibrook and Mr. Miller; rabies study and control of rabies vaccines, Dr. Wright; research on whooping cough, hemophilus influenzae infections, Dr. Pittman; influenza virus and pneumococcus studies, Dr. Eddy.

Laboratory of Physical Biology: The Wilson Cloud Chamber, Dr. Howard L. Andrews; electroencephalograph and cathode ray oscilloscope for measuring brain waves, Dr. Wade H. Marshall; the electron microscope, Dr. R. W. G. Wyckoff; high altitude test chambers, Dr. Howard F. Brubach.

Pharmacology: treatment of traumatic shock, metabolism changes in shock, and histamine studies, Dr. Herbert Tabor and Dr. Sanford Rosenthal; dental research, control of dental caries by fluorinating public water supply, and study of tooth structure with electron microscope.

The above list of exhibits and demonstrations is but a small part of those scheduled to be presented. Others include work with the mass spectrometer, photomicrographs of cellular particles, cancer research, blood testings, electrocardiography and many others.

The anniversary also will be marked by a banquet at 7:30 p. m. Saturday at the Statler Hotel. Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing and Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele will speak. Personnel with 25 years or more of service will receive special recognition.

New Zoning Board Due for Arlington

The Arlington County Board may act on Saturday to appoint a new Board of Zoning Appeals.

The entire board submitted its resignation, effective yesterday, some time ago, so that the board could exercise its appointive power granted by the Virginia General Assembly last winter.

The county board has asked the entire board to continue in office, but two members, Gilbert Hall and J. W. Trick, have indicated they would prefer to leave their positions.

U. S. Sells Britain Military Supplies In West Germany

By The Associated Press

The United States has sold Great Britain all lend-lease military equipment in British possession in western Germany and overseas territories, the State Department said yesterday.

Britain paid 7 million dollars, which the State Department said was more than the United States could get by disposing of the material in any other manner.

This belated transaction is part of a "final and conclusive" settlement of Britain's 14-billion-dollar wartime lend-lease account with the United States.

Government officials said, however, the American Government reserves the right to veto British sales of these lend-lease stocks to third countries and to repossess them if necessary.

Gales School Conversion to Start Soon

Conversion of the old Gales School, G st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., into a health center will begin in approximately three weeks, Municipal Architect Merrel A. Coe revealed yesterday.

A $106,000 contract for the project has been awarded to W. Jennings Jones, he said. The conversion will take about eight months to complete.

Plans for the project were temporarily delayed by a $7500 fire which swept the building June 2, but the damage was not serious enough to force abandonment of the conversion.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland said one third of the necessary funds will be made available by the Federal Government under the Hill-Burton National Hospital Construction Act of 1946.

Under this act, Congress authorized 75 million dollars annually for the next five years to be spent on Nation-wide hospital improvementts, of which the District's share is about $298,350 a year. A portion of this share will be used for the conversion and must be matched on the basis of two local dollars to one Federad dollar.

Asthmatic . . .? Who, Me . . .?

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

BEATING UP A DUST STORM—Mrs. Agnes Richardson learns her own strength as she beats a rug. Son George, 5, cheers her on in the back yard of their home, 252 California Hall, Arlington Farms, Va. A year ago Mrs. Richardson was believed on the verge of death from asthma, but has fully recovered after a special operation. Dust, now, is just to be cleaned up.

with some success since 1930, but the risk appeared too great.

"It seems likely that early attempts may have been abandoned because of distressingly high operative mortality," said Dr. Blades in his report. "Refinements in operative techniques and, more important, improvements in anesthesia should reduce greatly the immediate risks of operation."

He still urged, however, that chest surgery "should not be considered until conservative measures have failed completely."

Dr. Blades' operation for intractable asthma (severe and continued asthma that responds but little if at all to measures short of surgery) was termed a "unilateral, left-sided parasympathetic denervation and destruction of the pulmonary plexus." The surgeon noted that in previous chest nerve surgery, physicians concentrated on the right side of the chest "for reasons unknown."

Dr. Blades, however, employed a left-side approach "on the basis that the arterial side of the chest might have a more abundant parasympathetic nerve supply."

His first patient, he reported, was a 29-year-old woman at Walter Reed General Hospital. She suffered bronchial asthma for 15 years and "her situation was so desperate that surgical intervention was considered." He performed the operation in June 1947.

"The patient's subsequent progress has been dramatic," Dr. Blades reported in the medical journal. "She has had no attacks of asthma, does her own housework . . . and has gained 25 pounds. She has cooperated in trying to provoke attacks of asthma, particularly in connection with diet (cabbage) and contacts with house dust (to which she had been particularly allergic)."

In case No. 2, a 37-year-old man, Dr. Blades reported, the patient stopped normal breathing for four hours during the operation, with Dr. Lloyd H. Mousel "maintaining respiratory exchange" until spontaneous respiration was resumed.

"Since July 1947," the surgeon's report stated, "he has had no attacks of asthma, feels well, and enjoys full activity."

Cases 3 and 4 were not discussed at length because "post-operative observation has not been long enough to determine the final results." Of No. 3, he reported: "She believes she has obtained beneficial results." Of No. 4 he wrote: "He has been free of symptoms and requires no medication."

Dr. Blades is continuing his work in surgery for asthma under a grant from the Marcelle Fleischmann, Inc., Foundation, of Baltimore, Md. The grant permits hospitalization of patients at George Washington University Hospital here.

Woman With No Hope for Life Year Ago Defies Asthma Today

A 30-year-old Arlington woman, given no chance to live a year ago, is free of asthma today and living normally—thanks to the scalpel of Dr. Brian Blades.

"I'm living like a normal human being for the first time in 15 years," said Mrs. Agnes Richardson of 252 California Hall, Arlington Farms, yesterday.

Mrs. Richardson, wife of an Army chief warrant officer, was the first of four asthma victims who underwent, with at least temporary success, the denervation surgery of Dr. Blades, chief of the George Washington University Hospital department of surgery.

Born in Honolulu, Mrs. Richardson had a progressively worse case of asthma from the time she was 15. She suffered throughout a pregnancy that resulted in a son, now 5 years old. After that, she had recurrent attacks. On advice of doctors, she left the islands where flowers bloom throughout the year. She lived in California, Pennsylvania and the District, but her condition grew no better.

"Before the operation I couldn't eat eggs, cereal, cabbage, tomatoes, beans, cucumbers, mayonnaise, pork, wieners, lamb chops, fish, fried meat, peanut butter, sauces of any kind, apples, oranges, watermelon, candy, peanuts, ice cream. I couldn't drink milk, chocolate, coffee or any kind of fountain drinks. Dust made me wheeze."

In June last year, after several hospitalizations, doctors at Walter Reed Hospital were convinced she was dying and told her about Dr. Blades' work with a special surgical technique.

"They gave me a few days to make up my mind, but it took me only a minute to decide," she said. The operation was performed in July.

Today, Mrs. Richardson eats anything she wants, does her own housework again, goes fishing with her husband, has gained 25 pounds, is active as a tomboy.

Without a wheeze, she pounded clouds of dust out of a rug yesterday to prove it for a news camera.

(41 employes), and National Guard Armory (25 employes).

If subsequent rulings grant the raise to these employes, District officials estimate it will cost the city about $150,000 more a year.

Terming the results of the ruling an "intolerable inequity" to other District employes, Fowler called for speedy passage of the District sales tax at the forthcoming special session of Congress.

The Federal Pay Act barred District employes from the pay boost until Congress passed legislation to provide necessary funds. Passage of the District sales tax would grant them the raise automatically, officials said.

sales tax in the only practical way to finance the salary increases. Tydings said he'd be for a sales tax or any other measure which would do the trick.

Meanwhile, Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), author of the District home rule and reorganization bill, declared yesterday that action on the legislation in the special session would be up to Congress' leadership. He said he planned to confer with Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), chairman of the House District Committee, on strategy by the end of the week.

The home rule bill was taken up for one day in the House, but action never was completed in the last session. Both Republican and Democratic conventions came out for home rule here.

Fatal Shooting Of D'Alesandro Firm Aide Probed

Baltimore, July 15 (AP).—A special investigation was ordered today in the death of Ernest Joseph Bauer, 49-year-old insurance man found fatally wounded in his car outside a crab feast.

He was office manager and secretary of the insurance firm operated by Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro of Baltimore.

Bauer was found holding a police service revolver. He had driven Sergt. Jerome Carroll of the Police Department and City Councilman Leon Abramson to the crab feast. Sergeant Carroll said he had removed his revolver before going into the party and asked Bauer to lock it in the glove department of the car.

Knows His Turnips, Truman Friends Say

Kansas City, July 15 (AP).—Missouri's turnip growers lined up almost to a man today behind President Truman's July 26 date as "Turnip Day."

Old-timers weren't sure how much of a turnip man the President was in his days as a Grandview farm boy.

"He probably was a patch man (one who raises for his own family's consumption only)," one speculated, "but he obviously knows his turnips."

Exact Date in Doubt

The turnip growers had to admit, however, that actually they'd never heard of such a day. Thomas D. Sheahan, commissioner of city markets here, backed the date by saying "the President's close enough to be right."

In his acceptance speech at the Democratic National Convention, the President remarked he intended to call Congress back on July 26, which "out in Missouri we call 'Turnip Day.'"

One supporter of Mr. Truman's date was Charles Lecluyse, president of the Standard Seed Co. here. He recalled a common saying among Missouri Valley turnip growers:

"The 25th of July, sow turnips, wet or dry."

Sheahan figured since July 25 comes on Sunday this year, the President simply moved up his "Turnip Day" to Monday.

The market commissioner enjoys quite a reputation as a vegetable man. Yet to be sure about this turnip business, he polled truck farmers, showing up today at the city markets with products.

"Most of them agree that while there is no specific day set aside for turnip planting, that the last week in July is the best in Missouri," he reported.

Robert O. Reich, quite a turnip man himself, thought the President had "topped turnips" (ones raised in small quantities) in mind when he spoke of July 26. Reich described himself as a "bunch turniu" man (bunch turnips are topped and sold by the bushel commercially).

"We bunch men," he reported, "like to plant late in August."

All the turnip men seemed to agree on one thing—it takes 45 to 50 days for turnips to mature.

Wallaceites Ready to Move Into Philadelphia Saturday

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—Wallaceites move into Philadelphia Saturday to complete the political convention cycle.

Howard

The Nation's newest political party, which variously has called itself the Progressive, New, Third and Wallace-for-President party, will hold its founding conclave here July 23 to 25.

The Republicans held sway in Philadelphia the week of June 21 and the Democrats wound up their session early today.

Wallaceites will establish headquarters at the Bellevue-Stratford by Saturday.

And one week later the party will choose as its standard-bearers Henry A. Wallace for President and Idaho's Senator Glen H. Taylor for Vice President.

Tugwell Heads Platform Group

Wednesday the party's platform committee, headed by Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, professor at the University of Chicago and one-time New Dealer, will begin hewing its campaign planks.

Proposed for the party's keynoter is Charles P. Howard, 53-year-old Negro attorney and newspaper publisher of Des Moines, Iowa. Howard has been prominent for 25 years in Iowa Republican circles.

Opening of Wallace headquarters Saturday coincides with a meeting of another fringe of the Democratic Party at Birmingham, Ala., where Southerners will hold a rump convention to select their own presidential candidate and separate platform.

Delegates Summoned

Luke W. Wilson, assistant manager of the Wallace convention, said the national Wallace-for-President Committee "has issued our convention call 'broadside' for 4248 delegates and 531 alternates."

That's eight delegates for each of the Nation's 531 electoral votes and one alternate for each vote.

In States where the party has not been established, the convention call was sent to the State Wallace-for-President Committee with authority to designate delegates.

Other States elected delegates at founding conventions.

The Wallaceites will shift from Convention Hall to Shibe Park for the acceptance speeches of Wallace and Taylor on the night of July 24.

A price ranging from 65 cents to $2.60 will be placed on the 33,000 seats at the park. Convention Hall seats 13,000.

Wilson said proceeds "will help pay convention expenses. The city of Philadelphia gave the Republicans and Democrats $200,000 each for holding their conventions here. But we didn't get a cent."

The city did, however, extend to the new party the use of Convention Hall.

Wallace and Taylor will come to Philadelphia Thursday or Friday of next week. Their nomination will be sometime Saturday afternoon.

Wind-up Sunday

Sunday, the final day of the conclave, the new party will adopt a platform, elect officers and lay down party rules.

Elmer A. Benson, former Governor of Minnesota and chairman of the national Wallace-for-President Committee, is scheduled to come to Philadelphia early next week along with five cochairmen.

They are Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the CIO-United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers; Singer Paul Robeson; Sculptor Jo Davidson; Mrs. Anita McCormick Blaine of Chicago and Dr. Tugwell.

Democratic Proposals Futile, Says Baldwin

New York, July 15 (AP).—C. B. Baldwin, campaign manager for Henry A. Wallace, third party presidential candidate, said today the Democratic convention nominated "the man nobody wanted and adopted a program nobody meant."

"The Democratic convention came apart at the seams in Philadelphia, and a special session of Congress will not sew it up again," Baldwin said in a statement.

"Mr. Truman has again talked out of the left side of his mouth. It was a safe performance since he well knows that the Democrats in Congress will not carry out his proposals.

"Even if it were so inclined, Congress couldn't vote funds for such things as public housing, public works and Federal aid to education so long as the bipartisans continue to spend billions of taxpayers' dollars to finance the cold war."

Visit of Dewey To Virginia Now In Planning Stage

Richmond, Va., July 14 (AP).—Plans for a Virginia appearance of Republican Presidential Candidate Thomas E. Dewey will be hammered into final shape by the State GOP State Central Committee in Norfolk August 6.

The State's Republican leaders are already at work preparing for the New York Governor's visit. Their work will be completed by the State Central Committee meeting in Norfolk.

It was erroneously reported yesterday that Dewey would make his Virginia campaign address at Norfolk August 6. No date or place has been set for Dewey's speech in this State.

9 Killed in Crash Of Army Bomber

Salina, Kans., July 15 (AP).—Nine men were killed today in the crash of an Army B-29 bomber returning from a simulated bombing mission over four Midwestern cities.

Col. Leslie G. Mulzer, commanding the 301st Very Heavy Bombardment Squadron at Smoky Hill Air Base near here, said one other member of the crew was seriously injured and three others escaped by bailing out at an altitude of 1200 feet.

The plane crashed as it was coming in for a landing on its return from a mission with a group of other bombers. It was one of a group which had made simulated bombing runs over St. Louis, the Kansas City and Omaha, Nebr.

Dixie Rebels Sound Call to Convention

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
SENATOR RICHARD RUSSELL of Georgia, who received 263 rebellious Southern votes for the Democratic presidential nomination in Philadelphia, said yesterday he would not attend or permit his name to used at the States Rights meeting in Birmingham, Ala.

Birmingham, Ala., July 15 (AP).—A troubled band of Southern Democrats, rallying to the cause of States' rights, headed for Birmingham today to name their own presidential candidate.

As they departed Philadelphia and the national party convention, wherein they were twice defeated, the call went out to all Southerners to meet in convention at Birmingham Saturday.

The summons was issued by Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi and former Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama to all those opposed to the civil rights program and the renomination of President Truman.

But whether these leaders would find the South united behind them was problematical.

Scheduled Arrivals

The Mississippi delegation was scheduled to arrive in Birmingham at 8:10 p. m. (CST) Friday night, some of the Alabama delegates from the national convention at 10:45 a. m.

Florida said it would bring seven members, and Gov. Ben. Laney of Arkansas said he "probably" would attend. Representatives of Texas and South Carolina also are expected.

Louisiana and Georgia already have said their delegates would not attend. Some of the other Southern States, who also rallied behind Senator Richard Russell (D., Ga.) forthe presidential nomination at Philadelphia, have not yet stood up to be counted.

Russell, who garnered 263 votes in convention for President, has declined use of his name as the South's candidate at Birmingham.

And the senior Senator from Georgia, Walter George, has said he doesn't see what the Birmingham convention can hope to accomplish.

Trouble for South Seen

As a by-product of the South's convention fight and opposition to the civil rights proposals—a fair employment practices act, an anti-lynching, antisegregation and anti-poll tax laws—Russell foresees trouble for the South.

He predicted at his Winder, Ga., home the South would be kicked around considerably in the special session of Congress called by President Truman by both Democrats and Republicans bent on enacting a civil rights program.

Russell also declared he did not believe the Birmingham convention the best thing for the party at this time.

Both Russell and Editor Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution said they believed the cleavage in the Democratic ranks would result in a major realignment of parties in this country.

Va. Delegates Mute on Plans

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—Virginia Democrats headed for home today still officially silent about the outcome of the party's national convention and their plans for November.

Pledged to fight against any candidate espousing enactment of Federal civil rights laws, they were left without a candidate for the Presidency by the convention's nomination of President Truman.

Gov. William M. Tuck declined any comment on future plans and specifically on whether the Old Dominion organization would take part in a rump convention called to meet in Birmingham, Ala., Saturday to nominate a States' rights candidate for the Presidency.

Close associates of the Governor said privately, however, that he would have nothing to do with the Birmingham convention. They doubted that any members of the Virginia organization headed by Senator Harry F. Byrd would attend.

One other course remained open, but there was no indication it would be followed.

The State convention might be recalled. This could be done under a resolution adopted at its regular session. This permits such a recall by a two thirds vote of the State central committee. But no one was willing to guess what a recalled session would do in the circumstances.

Partial Text of President Truman's Acceptance Speech

GOP Congress Hit; President Says He'll Win

By the United Press

Philadelphia, July 15.—Following is a running account of President Truman's speech to the Democratic Convention beginning just before 2 a. m. today:

I can't tell you how very much I appreciate the honor which you've just conferred on me. I will continue to try to deserve it.

I accept the nomination.

And I want to thank this convention for its unanimous nomination of my good friend and colleague, Senator Barkley of Kentucky.

Promises to Win

He is a great man, a great public servant. Senator Barkley and I will win this election and make the Republicans like it. Don't you forget that.

We'll do that because they're wrong and we're right, and I'll prove it to you in just a few minutes.

This convention met to express the will of the Democratic Party. There have been differences of opinion, and that's the Democratic way. Those differences have been settled by a majority vote, as they should be. Now it's time for us to get together and beat the common enemy. That's up to you.

We will be working together for victory in a great cause. Victory has become the habit of our party. It has been elected four times in succession and I'm convinced it will be elected a fifth next November.

The reason is that the people know that the Democratic Party is the people's party and the Republican Party is a party of special privilege, and it always has been and always will be.

The record of the Democratic Party is written in the accomplishments of the last 16 years. I don't need to repeat them. They have been ably expressed by the keynote speaker (Barkley).

Confidence and security have been given the American people by the Democratic Party. Never in the world were the farmers of any republic as prosperous as the farmers of the United States. And if they don't do their duty by the Democratic Party, they're the most ungrateful people in the world.

And labor never had but one friend in politics, and that was the Democratic Party and Franklin D. Roosevelt. And I'll say to labor just what I've said about the farmers—they are the most ungrateful people in the world if they do not support the Democratic Party.

Reviews Foreign Policy

The record on foreign policy of the Democratic Party is that the United States has turned away permanently from isolationism and has converted the best Republicans from that policy.

The United States has to accept its full responsibility for leadership in international affairs. We have been the people who organized and started the United Nations, first started by Woodrow Wilson as the League of Nations. The league was sabotaged in 1920.

And we must see that the U. N. continues a strong and growing body so we can have everlasting peace in the world. We removed the trade barriers of the world, and that is the best asset we can have for peace. Those trade barriers must not be put back into operation again.

And I say to you all these things were done in a cooperative, bipartisan manner.

I've said time and time again, a foreign policy should be a policy of the whole nation and not a policy of one party or the other. Partisanship should stop at the water's edge, and I shall continue to preach that throughout this whole campaign.

I'd like to say a word or two now about what I think the Republican Party is, and I'll speak from history and experience.

HARRY S. TRUMAN, Democrat, nominated on the first ballot by 947½ votes to Russell's 263 and McNutt's ½

ALBEN W. BARKLEY Democrat, nominated for the vice presidency by acclamation

THOMAS E. DEWEY, Republican, unanimously chosen for the presidential nomination on the third ballot

EARL WARREN, Republican, nominated for the vice presidency unanimously on the first ballot

The situation in 1932 was due to the policies of the Republican Party's control of the United States. The Republican Party favors the privileged few and not the common everyday man. Ever since its inception, that party has been under the control of special privilege, and they concretely proved it in the Eighteith Congress.

They proved that by the things they did to the people and by the things they failed to do.

Time and time again I recommended extension of price controls. I asked for that extension in November, 1945, and in the message on the state of the Union in 1946. A price control bill did not get to my desk until the day it was supposed to expire.

It was such a rotten bill I couldn't sign it. And 30 days after that, they sent me one that was just as bad and I had to sign it because they quit and went home.

They (prices) have adjusted themselves all right. They've gone all the way up the chart and adjusted themselves at the expense of the consumer.

Slaps at Congress

I called a special session of Congress in November, 1947, and I set out a 10-point program for the welfare and benefit of this country, among other things standby price controls.

I got nothing. Congress has still done nothing.

Way back 4½ years ago when I was in the Senate we passed a housing bill known as the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill. It was a bill to clear the slums from the big cities and to help erect low-rent housing.

That bill, as I said, passed the Senate four years ago. It died in the House.

It was reintroduced in the House as the Taft-Wagner-Ellender bill. The House Banking and Currency Committee sat on that bill. It was forced out of the Banking and Currency Committee. And then the Rules Committee took charge. It's still in the Rules Committee.

Taft-Hartley Act Assailed

The bill they call a housing bill isn't worth the paper it's written on.

We needed moderate legislation to promote labor-management relations, but Congress passed the Taft-Hartley Act which will cause strife and ought to be repealed.

I tried to strengthen the Labor Department. The Republican platform in 1944 said if they were in power, they'd build a strong Labor Department. Do you know what they've done? They've torn it up. There's only one bureau left that's functioning, and they cut that so it can hardly function.

I recommended a higher minimum wage. What did I get? Nothing. Absolutely nothing.

Educational Aid

I asked the Congress to provide 300 million dollars to provide aid in the present educational crisis. Congress did nothing about it.

Time and again I recommended improvements in the Social Security law. Increase the amount of the benefits. Congress studied the matter for two years and couldn't find time to increase benefits, but did find time to take Social Security benefits away from 750,000 people. They passed that over my veto.

I asked the Congress to enact a health program. The Nation suffers from a lack of medical care. Something can be done about it.

Everybody knows that I recommended to Congress a civil rights program. I did so because I believed it to be my duty under the Constitution. Some of my own party disagreed violently. But the Republicans all profess to be for these acts.

"Rich Man's Tax Bill"

When tax relief can be given, it ought to go to those who need it most, and not to those who need it least as when these Republicans passed this rich man's tax bill over my veto. Everybody likes low taxes. But we must reduce the national debt in time of prosperity. They passed a tax bill over my veto on the third try. They finally sent a tax bill that was somewhat improved, but it still helps the rich and sticks the knife into the backs of the poor.

Now the Republicans came here a few weeks ago and wrote a platform. I hope you have read that platform. They adopted a platform and that platform had a lot of promises and statements of what the Republican Party would do. They promised to do a lot of things I've been asking them to do and tha they refused to do when they had the power.

High Prices Cited

The Republican platform cried about the cruelly high prices. I have been trying to get them to do something about high prices ever since they met the first time.

Now listen to this one; this one is easily as bad and as cynical. The Republican platform comes out for slum clearance and low rent housing. I've been trying to get them to pass that housing bill ever since they met the first time. And it's still resting in the Rules Committee, that housing bill is.

The Republican platform recommends extending and increasing social security benefits. And yet when they had the opportunity they took 750,000 off the social security rolls.

GOP "Failures" Listed

I wonder if they think they can fool the people of the United States with such poppycock as that? There's a long list of these promises in the Republican platform and if it weren't so late I'd tell you about all of them.

I've discussed a number of these failures of the Republican Eightieth Congress. A few of them are of major concern, the failure to do anything about high prices and housing.

My duty as President requires me to do everything within my power to get these things done.

I am therefore calling this Congress back in session on the 26th day of July.

On the 26th day of July, which I will call turnip day, I will call Congress back, and I am going to ask them to pass laws to halt high prices and to pass a housing bill.

"I Shall Ask Them—"

At the same time, I shall ask them to act on other vitally needed measures, such as aid to education, which they say they're for; a national health program; civil rights legislation, which they say they are for, and an increase in the minimum wage, which I doubt very much they're for. And an increase in social security, which they say they're for.

By indirection this Eightieth Congress has tried to sabotage the power policies that have been pursued for 14 years. That power lobby is just as bad as the real estate lobby which is sitting on the housing bill.

I shall ask for an adequate and decent law for displaced persons to replace that anti-Catholic, anti-Semitic law already passed.

Now, my friends, if there's any reality behind that Republican platform, we ought to get some action out of this short session. They could do this job in 15 days if they want to do it. They're going to try to dodge their responsibilities. They are going to try to drag all the red herrings across this campaign. But Senator Barkley and I are not going to let them get away with it.

The American people will not decide by words or platform, but by record. The record is that the stark battle lines of 1948 are the same as they were in 1932. In 1932, we attacked the citadels of special privilege and greed. We attacked the money lenders in the temple. Today in 1948 we are now the defenders of a stronghold of democracy and of equal opportunity. The battle cry is just the same now as it was in 1932, and I paraphrase the words of Franklin Delano Roosevelt in Chicago:

This is more than a political call to arms. Give me your help not to win votes alone, but to win in this new crusade and keep America secure and safe for its own people.

Now, my friends, with the help of God and the whole-hearted push which you can put behind this campaign, we can save this country from misrule from now on.

I must have your help. You must get in and push and win this election. This country can't afford another Republican Congress.

particular references to GOP haste in removing price controls and liberalizing rent controls.

Measures that the Congress failed to act upon but which the Republicans Party platform indorsed, probably will be emphasized.

The United Press last night quoted some Republicans as admitting privately that the President "seems to have us over a barrel." One was quoted as saying, "If we do as he asks he'll claim all the credit in the election campaign; if we don't he'll attempt to throw the blame on us for blocking his efforts."

Leading off in the attacks upon the President's action was the Republican National Committee. It described it as "the act of a desperate man . . . to obtain partisan advantage after he himself has lost the confidence of the people."

In the statement issued by Committee Chairman Representative Hugh Scott (R., Pa.) the committee said:

"The call for Congress is obviously motivated by political considerations.

"It has already been demonstrated that Mr. Truman cannot work with the Congress, either Republican or Democrat.

"He has repeatedly vetoed constructive legislation. It is hard to credit him with any constructive purpose in making the call, but he evidently hopes in some way, out of the confusion, that he may benefit at the expense of the country."

Enough heat was generated by the call to insure that the congressional session will experience more violent partisan strife than Congress has known in years. Nobody would predict that much important business will be transacted in such an atmosphere.

Particularly angry were the comments from the Senators up for reelection who will be forced by the special session to be in Washington while their opponents are free to campaign.

One of these, Senator Wayland C. Brooks (R., Ill.) heatedly declared that "never in the history of American politics has a Chief Executive stooped so low in his desperation to garner votes for his reelection.

"While Congress was struggling during the past several months with many problems confronting the Nation, Truman was already c a barnstorming political tour. He has completely lost beyond redemption the confidence of Congress and the American people."

Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) said "the special session is a piece of blatant politics unworthy of his office which will do our country no good whatever."

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) left early yesterday for Murray Bay, Canada, from the home of his son William H. Taft 3d, at New Haven Conn. The son said the Republican leader had not listened to Mr. Truman's Philadelphia speech, and that he doubted if the Ohioan would know of the call for the special session until he reached his destination.

Representative Charles (R., N. J.) chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, predicted the session "will be a Donnybrook Fair."

The general Democratic reaction was typified by Mr. Truman's running mate, Senator Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) Barkley called it "a courageous and proper thing."

From the deep South Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.) indorsed the call "to force action on housing."

There were discordant Democratic voices, too. Senator Walter F. George (Ga.), Southern conservative leader, called it "unwise politically." It gives the Republicans a chance "to pass housing and education legislation and take campaign ammunition away from the Democrats."

Representative Dwight L. Rogers (D., Fla.) said the session "will be useless and nothing will be done."

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) who ran up 263 votes in the Democratic presidential balloting, predicted that Republicans and Northern Democrats will "fight to see who can kick the South the hardest."

But anger was dominant in every Republican comment.

Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) GOP whip, said the call shows "how desperate Mr. Truman's determination is to try to put Congress in a bad light.

"The reason behind the call resounds with insincerity. Even if we pass constructive . . . legislation, the President in all likelihood will veto our efforts. The President knows full well his own Democratic stalwarts will filibuster any civil rights legislation."

Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.), chairman of the House Banking Committee—"The call is obviously a political move . . . and I think it will be so treated by Congress. The reasons why we have high prices will be brought out at this session, and I think Mr. Truman himself will have a lot to answer for."

Representative Walter Judd (R., Minn.)—The special session is "a cheap political trick and an attempt to shift the blame for the Truman Administration's failure to the Republicans."

Representative Howard H. Buffet (R., Nebr.)—It is "a desperate effort by Harry Truman to revive his vanishing political fortunes."

Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.)—The call is "purely a political move, uncalled for and unwarranted. The New Dealers had 14 years with large majorities in both houses of Congress in which to pass the legislation which they now ask the Republican Congress to pass in 15 days."

Representative George Bender (R., Ohio)—"World affairs have made it mandatory for Congress to remain in virtually continuous session since 1939, and the present international crisis also requires our presence."

Representative Frances P. Bolton (R., Ohio)—"Truman is desperate. He's grasping at anything to keep himself going, and is putting himself on the spot more than he realizes."

Senator Guy Cordon (R., Oreg.). "Just sheer desperation born of political expediency. He is not going to get what he really wants—the Presidency."

Representative John Taber (N. Y.), Republican chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee—a special session "is not in the public interest. There is no legislation that we can consider at this time which will help. The special session proposition is in the nature of cheap politics."

Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio), "It is the same old New Deal stuff—a synthetic emergency warmed-over once more in a last desperate effort to spend and elect."

Senator Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.).—"The presidential campaign will be rehearsed and rehashed. It would be better to leave Congressmen at home where they could determine what the people are thinking so as to prepare for the regular session in January."

Truman Speech Cheers Maryland Delegation

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—The Maryland convention delegation today expressed itself as "very much heartened" by President Truman's "fighting mood" in accepting the Democratic nomination for the Presidency.

Typical delegate comment on the President's speech were: "Splendid," containing much "pep and vigor."

The delegation, although disappointed by passage of the strengthened civil rights platform plank, will actively support the Truman-Barkley ticket in November, a spokesman said. The delegation voted "no" on the roll call on the issue.

Marylanders joined enthusiastically in the demonstration for President Truman.

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., delegation chairman, became separated from his demonstrating delegation—by a tuba and a cornet. He became sandwiched in a musical aggregation at the front of the hall, as two opposing columns of marchers met.

Senator Tydings of Maryland delivered one of the seconding speeches for nomination of Senator Barkley for Vice President.

The delegation originally had been pledged to Truman and Tydings, but was released by Tydings in favor of Barkley.

In the ballot on a proposal for a strong States' right platform pledge Maryland cast its 20 votes in the negative.

Rent Appeal Slated

Norfolk, Va., July 15 (AP).—July 30 has been set as the date the United States emergency court of appeals will convene here to consider the Ocean View rent decontrol dispute. The local rent advisory board will contest the ruling of Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods, who denied a request to decontrol Ocean View resort property.

Navy Man Held Suicide

Norfolk, Va., July 15 (AP).—A Navy court of inquiry in the death of Lieut. Edmund Leo Urbaniak found that he died of a self-inflicted bullet wound. Lieutenant Urbaniak died June 1 on the Navy hospital ship Consolation. He was found shot aboard the Whitley in Hampton Roads.

Phone Rate Boost Studied

Richmond, Va., July 15 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today took under advisement a petition of the Tidewater Telephone Co. of Warsaw for higher rate schedules applicable over most of its 14-county system.

Nine Arrested Here In Gambling Raid

Two automobiles containing every available member of the vice squad swooped down on the 1100 block of Vermont ave. nw. at 11:15 a. m. yesterday and arrested nine men on gambling charges. One of those arrested was carrying $5857 in his pockets.

Arrested were:

Webster Stewart, 29, Veterans Administration truck driver, of 411 L st. se.

John H. Miller, 24, Veterans Administration laborer, of 612 2d st. sw.

James Lundrum, 29, Veterans Administration mail carrier, of 617 New Jersey ave. nw.

Irving B. Summers, 55, clothing salesman, of 1620 Fuller st. nw.

Joe Marks, 48, unemployed, of 501 Longfellow st. nw.

William Saks, 54, restaurant owner of 718 Rittenhouse st. nw.

Alex London, 52, retired District government employe of 1146 15th st. nw.

Harry A. Brown, 48, unemployed of 1422 Irving st. nw.

Charges Preferred

All nine were charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips and an additional charge of setting up a gambling table was lodged against Summers, Marks and Saks.

The latter trio posted bond of $2000 each and the others $1500 each after arraignment before United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence who continued their hearing until 10 a. m., July 23.

Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, said he observed a number of men loitering near Thomas Circle when he passed by there June 28. Suspecting the men were gamblers, Blick said he assigned undercover men to the area.

Warrant Obtained Wednesday

On the basis of information uncovered by the investigators, a warrant for Stewart's arrest was obtained Wednesday from Commissioner Lawrence.

At about 11:15 a. m. yesterday, Blick said, a Veterans' Administration truck with Stewart behind the wheel drove up and stopped in the 1100 block of Vermont ave., and the driver handed a bulky package to Summers.

That was the signal, and the waiting detectives moved in—fast.

Blick said Summers tried to escape but was caught after a chase of several blocks. The vice squad chief said Summers had attempted to hide the package and several loose horse bet slips in an ash can but they were recovered by detectives.

Summers Previously Arrested

Blick said Summers was arrested about two weeks ago, at which time he had more than $4000 in his possession, and was charged with operating and possession. However, in that case, the United States attorney's office told police it would issue no papers in the case and advised police to present it directly to the grand jury.

Blick said a quantity of gambling paraphernalia was seized in the truck but did not identify it.

One of the men, Marks, told police he was unemployed. However, a search of his pockets disclosed $5857 which included 50 $100 bills. Blick said slips for several $300 horse bets were also found on Marks.

stricken apparently as a result of excitement at hearing the brawl. She was placed under the care of a physician.

Police were called and both men were taken to the hospital.

The Nazi swastika decorated dagger and a silver sugar bowl with a broken handle, both blood-stained, were taken to the Twelfth Precinct as evidence. Police did not disclose what role the sugar bowl played in the fatal melee.

According to police, Warner was employed at the Washington Navy Yard until recently, when he became ill. He had recently been released from a hospital, police said.

Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Whittaker as well as Warner had recently been hospitalized as a result of illness.

Montgomery Police Hold Man in Chevy Chase Burglaries

A 30-year-old man, who, police said, broke into four Chevy Chase homes stealing jewelry and other valuables estimated at $6000, was held in Rockville,. Md., jail last night.

The man, charged with burglary by Montgomery County police, was booked as Jack Raymond but police said the name was an alias.

The man's name was withheld, police said, after he agreed to recover the loot if this were done. It was indicated, however, that his identity would be disclosed later.

Detectives said the man made a full confession to the four housebreakings. About $1000 worth of loot was recovered in his room at 627 C st. ne. At that address, it was learned he was known as James Madison. County police said the man is also wanted by District police.

The arrest was made Wednesday night when Detective Edward Barber was looking for a suspect in the general area of the housebreakings and spotted a man wearing a sport coat similar to one reported stolen.

Barber immediately questioned the man and observed he was wearing a wristwatch also answering a description of one stolen.

When taken to Bethesda police station, police reported, he admitted the housebreakings and offered to help then recover the loot.

Detectives said they will take Raymond to Baltimore today where he reportedly disposed of more than $3000 worth of stolen property.

Principal victims, police said, were Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Rusch, 6909 Glendale rd., who reported $3600 in jewelry and valuables taken on June 30.

Other victims were Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Kelly, 200 Primrose st., who reported $2000 in valuables stolen May 20; Dr. and Mrs. Philip H. Varner, 7202 Connecticut ave., about $400 in valuables stolen July 10, and Mr. and Mrs. Lester A. Wells, 10 East Blackthorn st., approximately $50 in goods found missing last week.

A preliminary hearing on the burglary charge has been set for July 23 at 10 a. m. in Bethesda Police Court and bond was fixed at $5000. Police said the man was on parole from a Florida jail, where he had been confined until two years ago for housebreaking.

Tenants Challenge Brentwood Hike

An attorney representing tenants of the Brentwood Village apartment development yesterday challenged figures submitted by the management to justify higher rents.

David

An angry exchange between Joseph Forer, counsel for about half the tenants in the Northeast Washington development, and William J. David, operator of the project, enlivened the opening of a hearing on a rent boost petition yesterday before Rent Control Examiner Willam F. Mansfield.

Forer challenged statistics offered by the management on recent operating expenses of the 742-unit project and David retorted angrily:

"I don't load things, and I don't rig things, and I am beginning to resent this."

Under questioning by Forer, David admitted that in eight cases he had been charging slightly more rent than specified in the rental schedule he filed with the Rent Control Administrator.

These differences between the January 1, 1941 filed rentals, on which ceilings were based, and the amounts charged, were due to errors made by a clerk in filing a revised rental list, David testified. They ranged from 50 cents to $2 a month.

David's petition seeks permission to increase rents about 10 per cent in the Brentwood Development Corporation apartments, 10.5 per cent in the Brentwood Village Corporation units, and 14 per cent in the Brentwood Gardens, Inc. section. All three sections are in the same area.

Examiner Mansfield denied a motion by Forer to recess the hearing because of "phantom ceilings," ruling that discussion of the ceilings could be taken up in a closed session later. The examiner also disallowed Forer's motion to rule out the expense sheets submitted by David.

The hearing on the rent increase petition will be resumed at 9:30 a. m. today in the board room of the District Building. Attendance yesterday ranged from a dozen to about 50 tenants.

Railroads Have Ticket Boom

Travelers, trying to get under the wire before higher passenger fare rates go into effect Monday on most Northeast lines, created a business boom at railroad ticket offices here yesterday.

Sales were up from 10 to 15 per cent at downtown ticket offices, Pennsylvania, and Chesapeake & Ohio officials estimated. A Baltimore & Ohio repersentative said the company's office was "twice as busy as normal."

Ticket sales at Union Station have been "heavy" for several weeks, an official said, but he pointed out that normal vacation travel was probably responsible since sales were "not quite so high as last year at this time.

The average 17 per cent passenger fare increase, which goes into effect on most roads July 19, was granted July 9 by the Interstate Commerce Commission to railroads operating east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers.

Backward Step

The plea for moderation in pressing for Federal legislation affecting civil rights would come with better grace from the Southern States if they themselves were making a more vigorous effort to conform to basic American principles. While leaders of the Democratic Party were sweating over their civil-rights plank at Philadelphia, word came from Mississippi that Senator Eastland, who has virtually no opposition in his campaign for reelection, will stump the State for an oppressive change in the Mississippi constitution. This proposed modification would permit election authorities to require that applicants for registration offer evidence that they had "sustained" a "good moral character."

Patently this is a scheme to disfranchise Negroes, or, rather, to prevent them from taking advantage of the right they won through a Supreme Court decision of participating in the Democratic primaries. Officials having the power to exclude from the polls voters supposed to lack "good moral character" could exercise dictatorial control over the choice of public officials. Government by the people would be changed to government by sufferance of those in power. The scheme is so obnoxious to the ideals of American democracy that it will strengthen the hands of those who are trying to impose upon the South a code of civil rights that it is not willing to accept. How long will it take for politicians of the deep South to understand that their own flagrant departures from the American concept of human rights is the strongest argument of the extremists who wish to make Washington responsible for enforcement of all civil rights?

Soviet Reply

The negative response to the three-power demand for the lifting of the Soviet siege of Berlin leaves the next move up to Secretary Marshall. Mr. Marshall's motto in life is said to be: "Don't attack a problem, meet it." General Clay's seems to be the same, though Mr. Marshall's job is to see a problem in the large, not through the restricted view of our proconsul in Berlin. He is, however, no less determined than General Clay to insist upon Soviet respect for American rights. Both of them appear to have the strong support of American opinion, as well as of the British and to a lesser extent of the French, in continuing "Operation Vittles," and British participation in the air operation is important and enthusiastic.

All the same, the Soviet reply remains to be answered. Is the next epistolary step to be an ultimatum? It is said that Senator Vandenberg, conscious of the psychological stakes involved, wanted the note of July 6 to be an ultimatum instead of a protest. Suppose there is one, and still there is no climbdown. Mr. Marshall in his note hinted at an appeal to the United Nations, presumably under Chapter VI, though Senator Vandenberg is reputed to feel that the Soviet act is highhanded enough to warrant the invocation of Chapter VII. The difference is that the former provides for the pacific settlement of disputes, the latter for action for breaches of the peace.

In any case the procedure would take time, and, in view of the number of parties involved, might not get much further than a sort of record for world opinion. By no means do we exclude such a reference; it is essential procedure at least to keep the United Nations advised of international difficulties which put peace in jeopardy. Still the only way to "meet" the problem is to keep up the supplies to Berlin. It is in this respect that a reexamination of the Western hand is in order. There is an abundance of optimism that the present air lift can be maintained indefinitely. Aside from the enormous cost of the enterprise, however, this view is too rosy. The 2¼ million Germans have to be maintained at work as well as fed, and this will shortly be a consideration as coal and raw materials run short.

It is suggested that the Germans, whose nationalism has been stirred powerfully by the events in Berlin, might be enlisted in pushing trucks through to Berlin. They have become thoroughly embroiled, and are only too anxious to be of service in an undertaking aimed at preventing German starvation in Berlin. An informal suggestion has come to our notice that prior to arming convoys, the Germans should be given the necessary trucks with the food and materials for their fellow countrymen, and that they should be covered by aerial photography and/or fighters. The assumption is the Russians wouldn't dare to scuttle errands of mercy, not on humanitarian grounds, but because of the impact of such preventive acts upon the German population whom they are trying to seduce. Whatever form is taken to keep Berlin supplied, the situation is now such that there can be no imitation of the Duke of York, who, you remember, marched gallantly up the hill and then ignominiously down.

Truman: Nominee

In winding up the Democratic Convention, Mr. Truman incited a fighting spirit in the Democracy and spread dismay among its enemies. Nothing more can be asked of an acceptance speech. In Mr. Truman's case it was an astonishing tribute to a man who had two strikes against him when he mounted the rostrum. The hall was peppered with delegates and leaders the echoes of whose excoriations of the man as unfit were still vivid in the convention's memory. A deep chasm in the party yawned below. Having sponsored compromise in the platform, Mr. Truman was commanded to stand on one that was made by the extreme left of his party, which, moreover, included his most vocal opponents. It was a testing as well as a high occasion for the man from Missouri, and, to the surprise of many who expected an anticlimax, he "showed 'em," kindling the delegates with a verve and a political skill that were undeniable.

The Republicans, who had been looking tolerantly at the unseemly spectacle in Philadelphia, also got a jolt out of the Truman acceptance. Theirs was a jolt to their complacency. The President announced his intention to call Congress back in special session to repair sins of omission and of commission, and action has now been taken. At one time we thought that Congress should return, but only by agreement, and certainly not for the purpose of electioneering. The idea was smart politics, no doubt, on Mr. Truman's part—for the Eightieth Congress left plenty of skeletons in the closet—but it will insure a dirty campaign, unedifying and divisive in the national rather than the party sense. Can the country afford it? We think not. The time of tension in relations with Soviet Russia is surely no time to turn Capitol Hill into a bear garden, as will surely happen. The President had a responsibility to prevent any such exhibition. Even as candidate the President may not be gainer. A filibuster on Federal legislation on civil rights will be inevitable, and this is likely to be such a shocking farce, in the setting of the circumstances and the times, as to repel all responsible people.

Mr. Truman as the spearhead of a new liberal movement in the Democratic Party which is prepared to sacrifice the South is a phenomenon. He did not ask for it. He wanted the healing touch of the old-fashioned weasel words of traditional platforms. He must have been the most surprised man to read the encomium to him and his civil rights program that the convention thrust upon the party. The group responsible for the counterrevolt against the South is said to have been Americans for Democratic Action, who, however, would rather have had a standard-bearer in General Eisenhower, though Eisenhower's instincts are as much against the anti-States rights platform as Governor Laney's. The performance was, indeed, a curious one. But it will go on till it is resolved by a new party line-up providing for more honest politics. Mr. Truman's speech gave the impression that he may yet be destined to play a leading part in the house cleaning.

Middle East

The joint action on Palestine which marked the American and British approach in the United Nations to the Palestine muddle is a sign that a common policy is in the making It is about time. A vacuum exists in the Middle East which, if it is not filled by joint British-American effort, may be filled by Soviet Russia. Already the Communists are fishing in the troubled waters. It used to be said that the fishing was being done in the Arab countries—which was as much a misreading of the situation as the preclash feeling among our policy-makers that the Jews would be exterminated. The real danger of Soviet infiltration exists in Israel, where the moderates, given an ungenerous view of its rights, needs and sacrifices, might have to give way to extremists who would turn to Soviet Russia as Israel's only consistent friend. British and American policy must keep this possibility in mind in persuading the Arab chieftains to accept the plain facts of what Count Bernadotte calls history.

There is much that remains to be done in the Middle East that awaits the leadership of the Western powers. The Arab League is a totally artificial creation. It will have no raison d'etre when the realities of Palestine have been recognized. Race is no nexus, anyway, in the Middle East, for the Jews are as closely akin racially to the Arabs as the Egyptians are. There is no link, either, in religion, for there are several religions involved, and the Moslem world, furthermore, is split into several sects. Yet the suggestion in the Bernadotte report that Jerusalem should be left to King Abdullah and made into a kind of Pan Islamic center has a religious bias. Such a solution cannot have commended itself to the Lebanese —indeed, to any country where there are Christians with any feeling left for the Holy City. Certainly the Jews would feel themselves deprived of a soul without an equal say in Jerusalem.

What is needed in the Middle East is some common organ based on geography—an organ that would include Turkey, Iran and maybe Greece. Israel could play a healthy part in such a combination, as was recognized by such men as T. E. Lawrence. Lawrence looked on the Jews as "the natural importers of that western leaven which is so necessary for the countries of the Near East." When Zionism had achieved success, he said, "their scheme will involve inevitably the raising of the present Arab population to their own material level, only a little after themselves in point of time, and the consequences might be of the highest importance for the future of the Arab world." Israel's orientation to the Western world needs to be encouraged in order that Israel's role may be as constructive as Lawrence forecast.

Rewarding Mr. Barkley

One decision at Philadelphia from which there was virtually no dissent either inside or outside the convention was the nomination of Senator Barkley for the Vice Presidency. "He's earned it," was the comment one heard everywhere. And of course this reference was not confined to the Senator's stirring keynote speech on Monday night. It referred to his long years of wheelhorse service to his party and his country, especially in the role of Senate majority leader in those momentous years between the fight to reorganize the Supreme Court in 1937 and the Republican victory in the congressional elections of 1946.

There are sound strategic reasons for the Barkley nomination. If the Philadelphia convention has sounded the keynote of the Democratic campaign, it will be centered on the record of the Eightieth Congress. The leader of the opposition in the Senate is in the best possible position to exploit this issue, as he did in his keynote address. No less important is the bridge that genial Mr. Barkley will provide between North and South. While adhering to a liberal point of view and laying great emphasis upon the place of civil rights in the American system, he retains the confidence of the South. It remains to be seen whether he can turn out enough salve to heal the wounds that the fight over civil rights has caused. But he is undoubtedly the strongest healing influence the Democratic Party has.

The one factor which casts doubt on the wisdom of the nomination is Mr. Barkley's age. Before the Senator could be sworn in, if he should be elected, he would be 71; before the expiration of his term, 75. In spite of his present vigor, this age factor would certainly count heavily against him if he were being nominated to the Presidency. And of course the only purpose in having a Vice President is to give assurance that the Presidency will fall immediately into strong and competent hands in case of death or incapacity on the part of the President. From this viewpoint, as well as from the viewpoint of building up vigorous young leadership within the party, the convention was shortsighted.

But the impulse to reward Senator Barkley has been strong. President Truman could not risk further dissatisfaction with his own nomination by resisting this tribute to a tried and stalwart leader whose good will would be imperative to the success of the next Truman Administration if the President should win. It is safe to say that the Democratic Party is much happier about the filling of the second place on the ticket than about the first.

Peron's Radio

There is a delightful irony in the condemnation of Argentine radio policy by the Inter-American Broadcasting Association meeting in Buenos Aires. President Peron himself had assured members of his faith in unhampered freedom of the air and opposed "all attempts to restrict it regardless of the ideological pretext that may be adduced." But delegates were not taken in by this whitewash. Reaffirming the finding of the association made in February, representatives of 14 nations went on to sign a declaration stating, among other things, that "liberty of dissemination as conceived by our association has been virtually abolished in the Argentine radio."

In all probability delegates were struck by the inconsistency between Peron's pronouncements and the actions of his government. Inconsistency, however, is Peron's middle name. If there is anything that has marked the dictatorial tendencies of the Peron regime, it has been the systematic suppression of opposition thpught in both radio and the press. It is worth noting that despite Peron's friendly words, members of the opposition were unable to buy radio time during the political campaigns in February and March of this year. Some details of the kind of velvet intimidation exercised by the government are given in a recent article by Philip Hamburger in the New Yorker. Broadcasters have been cowed into silent submission by the fact that the government controls licenses and can revoke them at will. By the same token, private stations are forced to broadcast gratis daily government "news" programs in which frequent denunciations are made of Peron's enemies. Indeed, so tender is the concern of Peron for the fare of Argentine listeners that recently a popular radio actress suspected of anti-Peron views was forced off the air for using "slang."

Peron's contempt for objectivity was never better demonstrated than in his choice of a delegate to the United Nations Conference on Freedom of Information this spring. He picked, with consummate gall, the chief Argentine censor! The nose-tweaking administered by the broadcasting association in Peron's own capital was an act of courage that emphasizes the wide gap between his lip service to freedom and the genuine article. The significance of this reaffirmation of principle is that Peron's restrictions are now bucking not only the democratic forces within his own country but also the unified opinion of the hemisphere.

"Loyalty Hallucination"

Since the appearance of a letter signed by "B. C. B." under the caption, "Loyalty Hallucination," in The Washington Post on June 5 which has elicited other correspondence to The Post, we of the FBI have made a most diligent effort to identify the case in order that we might check into all the details.

Since B. C. B. refuses to identify the case and since he apparently is not conscientious or sincere in desiring to correct a wrong, if a wrong has been committed, I am forced to the conclusion that the statement he attributes to an FBI agent is either grossly exaggerated or the result of a misunderstanding. The statement which he alleges was made, "No proof or evidence is necessary because even hallucinations of neurotics are evidence enough, for sometimes hallucinations are based on something tangible," does not sound like an agent's statement, for agents are a group who have been trained to sift facts in a realistic and rational manner. In the absence of proof to the contrary I am forced to the conclusion that B. C. B.'s statement is a gross exaggeration.

If B. C. B. were sincere and conscientious he would come to the FBI with our full assurance that his identity would be protected and identify the case in order that we might inquire into it further. His alibi that he fears the FBI is as untrue as his statement purporting to quote an agent is exaggerated.

Without the case being identified, B. C. B.'s remarks in effect degenerate into a smear. The FBI does not function as indicated and in other instances where sweeping accusations were traced down they have been found to be false.

Berlin And The U. N.

I wish you or someone would enlighten me on the United Nations' role in the present Berlin crisis . . . Is it being totally ignored?

According to the vast majority of newspapers and news magazines, the Berlin crisis is no vague, two-sided issue; it appears without question completely the fault of Russia's actions and she would be responsible if the consequences were war. The cynic is justified in feeling that the United Nations is an impotent organization when only the vague, two-sided questions, i. e. Palestine, reach the agenda; could it be true that the Berlin crisis is not considered as international a question?

If this issue were on the agenda and Russia was endangering peace as it is assumed, I am certain there would be enough protests to make Russia, veto or no veto, change her tactics or suffer world condemnation, and I don't think she is as yet prepared to occupy such a position.

British Medicine

In the Journal of the American Medical Association, under date of June 19, there is a letter from the London correspondent with reference to the then-proposed National Health Service in England. Referring to the plebiscite conducted by the British Medical Association, he states: " . . . the first plebiscite showed 40,814 disapproving, and only 4084 approving," when the medical profession was polled concerning the government plan for a national health service. Because of concessions made by the Minister of Health, a second plebiscite showed that "14,620 doctors approved, and 25,842 disapproved."

In The Washington Post on July 5, there was a news item headed "England Starts 'Free' Medical, Dental Service." In this item it is stated that "Of the 17,000 doctors in England and Wales, 14,784 have signed to take part. . . . The others have chosen to remain private practitioners." The inference is clearly that nearly all (14,784 of a total of 17,000) doctors have agreed to participate, whereas the total number of doctors is something more than 45,000, those participating being less than one third.

As printed, this article gives an entirely erroneous picture of the attitude towards government medicine of a majority of the British medical profession. I trust this is merely an unintentional error, since it has been the pride of the Associated Press that its news items are accurate and trustworthy.

"Faith In Freedom"

As is quite proper in a country where all sides of the question may be heard, on July 12 you published a revolting letter from Franklin T. Miles of Chevy Chase anent the state of education in Montgomery County. There is one element of misinformation which I would like to correct.

Socialism is not a close relation of communism. Communism follows the ignoble slogan that the end justifies the means.

Socialism, on the other hand, follows the belief that the means chosen will determine the ends.

To do this, socialism favors increased social ownership of the means of production—ownership by municipalities, States, cooperatives and other such methods of social ownership as may yet be invented. The object of such ownership is to increase social control by the people of their society. This idea is not the same as communism's avowed intention to put everything under the sole and supreme control of a monster state.

When individuals get hysterical for fear their children may learn about something new or different, and for fear that the mere contact with an idea will lead their children into fates worse than death, such individuals also appear to be afraid that their own ideas are weak and meaningless.

"Superseniority"

You state in your editorial of June 30 that veteran preference is a "form of largesse which may strike some members of Congress as more economical than direct handouts to veterans; but if it saves the taxpayers something in the form of candid veterans' payments, it is likely to cost him a great deal more in terms of lowered bureaucratic efficiency and morale."

Is it not a fair and square deal for our great Nation to give five points to the nondisabled veteran and 10 points to the disabled veteran on examinations and to give priorities on retention to the men and women who so gloriously defended our Nation, fought her battles, and brought to a successful conclusion the greatest conflict in world history?

The implications in your editorial to the effect that veteran preference is likely to cost the taxpayer a great deal more in terms of lowered bureaucratic efficiency and morale, that it is an obvious injustice to the nonveteran, an obvious impairment of the civil service merit system, that the veteran is going to get a Government job ahead of someone better qualified, that the veteran's retention is going to cause the caliber of the Federal service to go down another notch are indeed insidious. . . .

Facts and experience have shown that the average veteran is as well qualified for his position as any nonveteran.

Veteran preference is an expression of gratitude enacted into law by the great majority of good, solid American citizens through their congressional Representatives.

Another real purpose of the Veteran Preference Act of 1944 was to equalize the opportunity of the veteran who had spent from one to five years in the armed forces against the education, training, and job experience acquired during the war by the nonveteran. It is also a well recognized fact that out of the entire manpower of the Nation only those persons who measured up to good physical and mental standards were accepted for active military duty. Certainly the persons so selected represent the cream of the Nation and are eminently well qualified for further good and efficient governmental service.

For the purposes of retention it is necessary for the veteran to have an efficiency rating of good or better before he acquires the full benefit of the retention section. It cannot be interpreted that, with an efficiency rating of good or better, he is in any way bringing the caliber of the Federal service down another notch. . . .

GEORGE L. MacELROY.
National Civil Service Officer
Veterans of Foreign Wars.
Washington.

I believe you are right in taking the stand that veterans of the armed services of the United States should not be given extra points for such service in the grading of civil service examinations . . .

It seems to me Congress gave the privilege of superseniority to former service people without realizing its full effect. It allows a young single veteran, without family obligations, for example, to take the job of a Government worker of many years' experience, and who in those years has acquired a wife, children, and debts . . .

It is not necessary to remind us that we did not suffer the hardships and the fate of too many who went into actual battle for us. Here again, veterans differ as to their experiences in that respect. It was a large and complicated war, and from what I have heard from a lot of returned veterans, they were doing paper-work not far removed from what they had performed in Government while they were in military service.

But certainly we can never make it up to those who suffered mental and physical wounds in the conflict. They should be helped according to their needs.

Washington Calling

Philadelphia Contrast

PHILADELPHIA.—The two political conventions that have been held here in the City of Brotherly Love have not been edifying or high-minded or inspiring either to America or to the world. It seems on these occasions as though politics were the lowest common denominator of American life.

Philadelphia is unearthing a series of sordid scandals involving one Republican official after another. Holmes Alexander, in the Evening Bulletin has called the city "a sinkhole of corruption." And the graft and venality coming to light seems to justify that description.

If politics were the only expression of the American spirit we should be in a bad way indeed. Foreign visitors who accept the raucous political surface as the whole story are badly deceived.

Anyone sick of the platitudes of politics and weary to death of the meaningless phrases endlessly repeated might have found here in Philadelphia a force embodying the brotherly love that long ago gave the city its name. The American Friends Service Committee is a candle in the wind—a steadfast candle in the awful wind blowing across the world today.

The work that these Quakers are doing, the example they are setting, will be felt long after the words spoken here have been forgotten. I listened to Clarence Pickett, executive secretary of the committee, describe the work they are doing in Germany, Italy, Finland, Poland, China, Hungary, India and in this country.

The actual relief distributed is, of course, a drop in the vast bucket of need. The committee will spend only about six million dollars for foreign relief this year out of its limited budget.

WHAT IS supremely important is the example of the individuals who go out to do the work, living with the homeless and the dispossessed, sharing and understanding. It is the relationship between individual and individual that can break through the wall of propaganda and the fostered hatreds. And perhaps only that one force—brotherly love—can break through. That is what these Quakers believe and what they practice.

In the ruins of Berlin young American men and women are working alongside young Germans to build back a community center. They are digging bricks out of the rubble and sharing their food sent from America with their fellow workers.

In summer work camps in Poland other young Americans are overcoming the barrier of language as they work with young Poles to rebuild a school and a center for child care. Most of these Americans have paid their own way and their own expenses for this privilege. The volunteers who go abroad to direct the work, many of them specialists in their own fields, agree to serve for two years without pay.

The other day the Friends Service Committee announced that it was making a gift of streptomycin to the people of Russia as "testimony of goodwill." They have received permission from the Department of Commerce to send 3000 5-gram vials valued at $25,000.

THE QUAKERS who direct the Friends Service Committee refuse to be balked by the deadly phrase "iron curtain." They continue to work for understanding.

Last year the Friends were awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, a fitting recognition of years of service. They want to use the $20,000 in prize money to bring understanding with the Russians even though it be the smallest beginning.

They see the shadow of another war growing darker and darker and yet they refuse to accept the dread inevitabilities of power politics. They have seen at firsthand the havoc of war and they know that one more conflict might forever destroy the base of a free, Christian society. So they work and pray and work.

Those who have succumbed to the disease of power, and the number is legion, will hardly notice this effort. They may even think it is a shade ridiculous. What can these well-meaning people possibly do with their pathetic soup kitchens and their gentle kindness? Why, the Russians are our enemies.

The power man would naturally not understand the strength of these quiet people. It rests above all in their individual faith. That faith is in fact the strength of the Western world and if it goes, then all is gone.

We have heard a little of this in the two conventions. But they were lonely voices almost lost in the scramble for power and place. In the clatter and din and rush they were only faintly heard.

Correct Identity

In The Washington Post of July 9, Mr. Robert C. Albright in reporting the proceedings at the hearings before the resolutions committee of the Democratic National Convention, incorrectly identified one of the witnesses. He quoted from a statement by Mrs. Erwin K. Guttman, and identified her as a member of the National Committee on Education and Social Action. Actually, Mrs. Guttman was appearing on behalf of the National Council of Jewish Women, Inc., and is vice chairman of the council's Committee on Education and Social Action.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

He's Being Truman Now

Philadelphia. — "He's stopped trying to be President. He's being Truman now." A close observer of the President made the remark a little sadly, in the ghastly early hours of the convention's last day, while the President was shouting his defiance of the Republicans before the sweating delegates to the Democratic convention. The most striking thing about the President's speech was his final abandonment of the rather stilted, elevated tone which he has thought suitable to his office. He was campaigning for reelection as a county sheriff in the Ozarks might campaign.

The drama and interest of the whole episode were more genuinely intense than is usual in politics. There was, first of all the inescapable feeling that the President was venting on the Republicans some of the resentment which he feels against the Democrats who opposed his renomination.

It was known that his congratulatory telephone call to Senator Alben Barkley, the previous evening, had been rapidly transformed into a philippic against his enemies within the party. From the rear steps of the convention hall, where the President waited for hours to speak, word kept coming back of the sharpness with which he still felt this resentment.

THERE were, secondly, the circumstances of the stirring decision to call a special session of Congress, which was being bruited about hours before the President at length spoke. The decision was taken at the White House, without consultation with any of the congressional leaders. Even the President's running mate, Senator Barkley, was not informed of what was afoot at least until late in the afternoon before the convention's final session. Here in Philadelphia, Robert Hannegan, James Roosevelt and a group of Representatives of the big city leaders had agreed the previous evening that there ought to be a special session, and had passed their view to the White House. But very probably the President himself was not informed of this meeting, since a good many of those present had played leading parts in the abortive anti-Truman coalition. Truman and his advisers—most conspicuously Clark Clifford—took the decision by themselves, to all intents and purposes.

Then there were also the decision's motives. The President beyond question sincerely believes in the social and economic objectives which he set forth in his speech. It is also important to note that he and his advisers have sincerely convinced themselves, as threatened politicians so often can, that the victory of their opponents will inevitably usher in a total triumph of reaction and perhaps fascism. These two beliefs provided the atmosphere of the decision.

In this connection, it is vitally important to distinguish between the effects of the call for a special session and the motives for the call. The Republicans in Congress richly deserve what they are getting. The President was entirely correct in almost every word he said about their handling of social and economic measures, no matter what you may think of the tone in which he said it. The Republican platform may, and probably does, represent the views of Governor Dewey and Governor Warren. But the platform's kind words for enlightened social policies do not correctly represent the congressional majority.

It will be incredibly costly and dangerous to have the whole country set by the ears, and all the dirty linen of our politics publicly washed, in a time of dreadful danger abroad. But it will also be useful to have the wide difference between the Republican candidates and the Republican Congress aired dusing the campaign. And certain badly needed legislation may even be passed before the special session ends.

SO much for the effects. As for the motives no one who is not very naive can suppose that securing passage of needed social measures was a predominating influence in the President's decision to call the session.

The decision was taken with the clear knowledge that tremendous risks were involved. Yet the real reasons for the decision were obviously political. First, a special session provides the President with an inexpensive form of electoral campaign. Second and more important, holding the session, which is helpful in view of the present state of Democratic Party finances, will be a much more effective way to campaign than a straight debating match against such a powerful adversary as Governor Dewey.

All these assorted facts, so complexly inter-related, in turn say something about the President himself. Even the majority of his oldest and closest friends now agree that he is a man who, although decent, patriotic, honest and courageous, has been terribly overburdened by the responsibilities of the presidency in such a time as this.

At first, he seemed to hate those responsibilities. Then he began to cling to them, as men in such positions will. And now that the campaign is ahead, and defeat looms up, he is "being Truman now" in the sense that he is fighting for reelection on a sort of no-holds-barred system, without any of those claims to the grand style which he used to try to make. It would have been better if he had fought for his program in this manner from the first. As matters stand, one must admire the President's courage. One must hope that those who deserve to be shown up in the fight are in fact thoroughly shown up. But one cannot help but fear the consequences of an all-out political free-for-all in the United States of 1948.

New Special Session 26th For Congress

By The Associated Press

The Eightieth Congress has been yanked back to Washington twice in less than a year to deal with matters President Truman considered urgent. But the meeting which starts July 26 will be its first special session.

The "special session" of last November 17—called by the President for action on foreign aid and inflation—wasn't a special session at all.

It was just a continuation of the regular session which had recessed, without formally adjourning, the previous July 27.

The extra meeting which Mr. Truman called for in Philadelphia today will be the twenty-sixth in the history of Congress. Special sessions have varied in length from 10 days in 1856 to 269 in 1841.

List of Sessions

The first was called by President Adams in 1797 to suspend diplomatic relations with France. The others:

1803—By Jefferson, on Spain's cession of Louisiana to France.
1807—By Jefferson, to consider relations with Great Britain.
1811—By Madison, preparatory to declaring war on Great Britain.
1814—By Madison, on matters concerning the war with Britain.
1837—By Van Buren, to suspend specie payments.
1841—By William Henry Harrison, to consider finances and revenue.
1856—By Pierce, to pass an Army appropriation bill.

High Cost of Living Looms As Hottest Campaign Issue

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 15.—The Democratic Party served adequate notice at its convention that the campaign issue to be debated most heatedly in the months ahead is the one that American voters cite as the Nation's most pressing domestic problem—the high cost of living.

Reasons why high prices have assumed top importance in voters' minds are to be found in statements by representative voters on the minimum family income required to live decently in their own communities.

In 1937 the typical American told Institute interviewers that a family with two children needed a minimum of $30 a week to maintain a decent home.

But when he answers that same question today, 11 years later, the average person says that it now takes a minimum of $50 a week for a family of four to make ends meet.

While family incomes have also increased substantially in this period, still at least approximately a third of the people say that their family incomes are below the minimum standards which they set.

After representative voters in today's survey had named the sum of money needed by a family of four, they were asked: "Is your total weekly family income larger or smaller than this?"

Here are the answers:

Larger	44%
Same	15
Smaller	32
Don't know	9

Politically, the important fact is that, regardless of how they fare today compared with 10 years ago, the 32 per cent who said their incomes were below standard feel that today they are having a hard time making ends meet.

Because of their numerical strength, the present party leanings of these voters carry important implications for this presidential campaign. And as of today they favor the Democratic Party, as their answers to the following questions show:

Leaving aside the question of candidates, which party would you like to see win the next presidential election—the Republican, Democratic, or Wallace's Third Party?

They voted:

Democratic Party	41%
Republican Party	37
Wallace's Third Party	4
No opinion	18

This gives further evidence that the Democratic Party leaders will lean heavily on the high cost of living issue, trying to pin the blame for soaring prices on the Republicans. It is significant, also, that these financially distressed voters give little support to the Wallace Third Party. In fact, the number who say they want the third party to win is below the national average as shown in recent opinion polls.

While the average American voter lists high living costs as the leading domestic issue, he is pessimistic about any immediate relief from the burden of high prices. In contrast to the attitude prevailing five months ago, 48 per cent of voters with opinions believe there will be further price boosts between now and 1949; in March only 14 per cent thought new increases were on the way.

This is another indication that the Democrats are striking at a vital issue. An Institute poll, earlier this week reported that a majority of voters citing high living costs as the leadiing domestic issue believe the Democratic Party can handle the problem of high prices better than the Republicans.

McGrath Reelected Party Chairman

made no reference to the fact that some Southern States have refused to contribute because of the split with Persident Truman over civil rights.

Blythe said the convention had cost "a great deal of money but we still can pay off."

Mrs. India Edwards of Maryland, executive director of the women's division, said every woman party member is going "to get out and work her damnedest to elect President Truman and Senator Barkley."

The veteran Edward J. Kelly, former Mayor of Chicago and long-time Illinois national committeeman, referred to McGrath as a "dynamic personality."

Kelly added that President Truman had been the victim of a "whispering campaign."

"He's no great grammarian, he's no great scholar, but is the type of man that many of our great Presidents have been."

Kelly said he regarded Mr. Truman as the "saviour of the world."

James Roosevelt, son of the late President and newly elected national committeeman from California, also pledged complete support for McGrath and the Truman-Barkley ticket.

Young Roosevelt drew a laugh when he referred to himself as "a loyal rebel of the past."

This was a reference to his participation in the drive to make Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower the presidential nominee, instead of Mr. Truman.

Arlington Dump Blast Laid to Shell

A six-inch Navy projectile caused the explosion at the Arlington county dump on July 9, Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg revealed yesterday.

Lundberg said the loaded explosive went off at a time when the dump was being burned over. He said that officials "may never" determine how the explosive found its way to the disposal area.

At the same time Lundberg warned all county residents who have war trophies or souvenirs to have them checked by the county to determine whether they contain explosive.

The county manager said that "thousands" of shells, projectiles or war souvenirs of a once explosive nature have been obtained by the public. "Many of them still hold the explosive powder they had originally."

Lundberg asked county residents to bring such material either to the county police or fire departments, where he said they would be checked "by a competent authority." The souvenirs will be returned to their owners after they have been made safe, if that is possible, Lundberg said.

The Federal Diary

U. S. Workers Hope For Pay-Raise Action In Special Session

Will the President follow up his statement when he signed the recent Federal worker pay-raise bill and ask the special session of Congress to correct its many "intolerable" provisions?

That was the No. 1 question yesterday of Federal and District workers. There was no definite answer to it. Perhaps the decision hasn't even been made. Also, opinion was divided on it, but several top-ranking officials were of the opinion the President would ask for pay legislation.

In his statement of July 3, the President lashed out at Congress for its failure to do the following:

To provide pay raises for District employes and top Federal officials, and to modernize and simplify the Classification Act which fixes the salaries of most of the Government's annual workers.

The President made the flat promise that he would take steps to correct the inequities by recommending corrective legislation when Congress convened.

STORY: In enacting the Interior appropriation bill, the GOP Congress attached a rider to it which will have the effect of forcing out Commissioner Mike Straus of the Reclamation Bureau. The rider requires that after January 31 the Reclamation chief must be an engineer. And Mike isn't an engineer—or he wasn't until a few days ago. Now he can lay claim to the title at least. This is the story:

Over the weekend, Mike was out in Kalispell, Mont., where he set off the first blast for the Hungry Horse Dam. While he was there a delegation of Blackfeet Indians came out of the mountains and invited Mike to be inducted as a member of their tribe. Mike accepted and the Blackfeet gave him this title:

"Engineer of the Wilderness Chief White Beaver."

P. S.: Now Mike may facetiously ask Congress: "Does the Indian name qualify me to serve as Commissioner of Reclamation?"

VA: The Veterans Administration today will announce pay raises of $330 each to its 15,000 doctors, nurses and dentists in its department of medicine and surgery. The employes aren't covered by the Classification Act. However, it was tipped off here that the employes would get the pay raise.

The only employes in the medical department who won't get the raise are doctors who are paid more than $11,000; consultants, attendants, part-time specialists, member-employes at domiciliary homes, residents in training and senior cadet nurses in training.

BLM: Sixty of the 200 employes in Interior's Bureau of Land Management yesterday were given layoff notices to go into effect on August 15. Many who received the pink slips were long-service career employes who do not have veterans' preference for consideration in retention.

The layoffs and the reasons for them were explained yesterday to a mass meeting of the entire bureau by its director, Marion Clawson. The employes were told that the agency had planned to decentralize for several years and that it had to be done now because Congress had slashed its budget to pay salaries here.

Clawson explained that all employes here had been given full opportunity to transfer to its 90 field offices in the West to fill positions of adjudicators and managers of field land and survey offices. Only 10 have requested transfers, he said, hence the forced layoff here.

STANDARDS: In its annual "call" for budget estimates, the Budget Bureau yesterday set up standards for Federal agencies in seeking funds to operate employe health programs and to replace autos.

Each agency was told to seek an average of $8 per employe to operate its employe health program.

STORY: A Federal worker who sings "My Old Kentucky Home" at a political convention is participating in politics and therefore stands to lose his job under the Hatch "no politics" Act. This is the actual story on it:

A young lady who is a Federal worker was asked to sing "My Old Kentucky Home" after Senator Barkley's nomination as Vice President at the Democratic convention. A cautious supervisor suggested that the girl get a ruling from Civil Service before she accepted.

The girl's letter threw the commission into a tizzy. It seemed silly not to allow it and yet the commission's regulations under the Hatch Act say clearly that a Federal worker covered by that law may attend a political convention "only as an observer."

So, the commission wrote the disappointed girl a letter which advised her to reject the invitation as she could be charged with participating actively in a political convention.

Crackdown On Drivers Hikes Permit Revocations

1082 Lose Permits In June for Traffic Violations Compared With 757 in May

A police crackdown on traffic violators has resulted in a 42 per cent increase in permits and privileges suspended and revoked during June.

Figures released yesterday by the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits showed a grand total of 1082 suspensions and revocations for June as compared with 757 for May.

Although the number of traffic accidents dropped in June over the preceding month, the total of permits and privileges nullified as a result of accidents increased by 90—302 for June against 212 for May. Accidents in May totaled 1167 while only 1019 were reported in June.

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, in charge of the Traffic Division, laid the seeming contradiction partly to an overlapping in cases from one month to the next but principally to the fact that "emphasis has been placed in prosecuting" those involved in accidents and traffic violations in general.

"Following an increase in accidents recently," Milled said, "and with the knowledge that with schools closed youngsters are more apt to be involved in traffic accidents, we have ordered all traffic policemen to tighten up in their reporting of accidents and in the prosecution of individuals."

Speeding was the prime factor leading to revocations and suspensions. A heavy foot on the accelerator accounted for action involving a total of 525 cases of revocation and suspension.

One permit was revoked because of unsound mind, one revoked and another one suspended for negligent homicide.

There were 304 appeals filed and 632 restorations granted, authorities said.

A total of 26 were "blacklisted"—forbidden to drive for an indefinite period—for driving without a permit of any kind.

Medical Society Drafting Quiz to Bar Unfit Drivers

The District Medical Society's traffic committee is drafting medical questionnaire forms designed to prevent physically unfit persons from driving motor vehicles in the District, Theodore Wiprud, executive director of the society, revealed yesterday.

The committee took up the matter at the request of Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, who pointed out that some persons who have been certified as safe drivers by doctors have been found incompetent during road tests.

The form being prepared by the Medical Society committee will contain explicit and detailed questions for doctors to fill out in certifying that applicants are able to drive safely.

2 Pedestrians Hurt, By Auto and Streetcar

Two Washington pedestrians were injured yesterday within 10 minutes in accidents involving a streetcar and an automobile.

At 12:50, police records show, John B. Mills, 71, of 611 B st. ne., was struck by a car operated by Homer L. Thurston, 28, of 1414 Montello ave. ne. The accident occurred in the crosswalk at 2d and East Capitol sts. ne. Mills, who suffered head injuries, is in an undetermined condition at Casualty Hospital.

Eight minutes later, David Gordon, 31, of 5273 Nebraska ave. nw., was struck by a streetcar operated by Clifford E. Morton of 1509 Arlington ter., Alexandria, Va., in the 1800 block of Pennsylvania ave. nw. Gordon was taken to Emergency Hospital where he was treated for head injuries and released.

Youth Fined in Auto Death of Grandmother

A 17-year-old Muirkirk, Md., youth was found guilty of manslaughter and reckless driving in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday, as the result of an automobile accident in which his grandmother was fatally injured July 6.

Robert Lewis Kirk, who lived with his grandparents at Muirkirk, was fined $500 on the manslaughter charge and $50 for reckless driving by Judge Alan Bowie, who suspended both fines pending good behavior. Young Kirk also was placed on probation for two years, during which he will not be permitted to drive an automobile.

The grandmother, Mrs. Albert F. Kirk, 60, apparently died instantly when the automobile driven by young Kirk glanced off the rear of an automobile operated by Robert Dare of Laurel, then plunged into the path of another car driven by Herman Drake of Pensacola, Fla., on Route 1 near Laurel, Md. Occupants of the other two cars were uninjured, but young Kirk suffered a broken left arm and lacerations of the head.

In District Court

4 Estates Total Nearly $700,000

Four estates totaling almost $700,000 were brought to the attention of the District Court yesterday.

The late John E. Benton, former general solicitor of the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners, left the bulk of his estate, valued at $414,205, in trust for his wife.

A copy of the will was filed by the Washington Loan and Trust Co., which petitioned the District Court to permit it to handle the District property involved in Mr. Benton's will.

Outright Bequests

The will grants outright bequests of $39,000 to a number of brothers, sisters, nephews, nieces and other relatives. It also gives $1000 each to St. Alban's Parish, Children's Hospital, and the Northfield Schools, Northfield, Mass.

His wife, Mrs. Janet Benton, is to receive an income from the rest of the estate, placed in trust, for life. She is to provide for their daughter, Jean Elizabeth Benton.

If his wife dies, the income is to be turned over to his daughter. If she dies, leaving no heirs or will, the estate is to be divided equally between Children's Hospital and the Northfield schools, according to the will.

Mr. Benton died June 21 at Suburban Hospital. He lived at 711 Elm st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Two Filed for Probate

Two other wills were filed for probate.

Monie Sanger, retired assistant superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, who died June 29 at Emergency Hospital, left an estate of $90,000 in cash and stocks and bonds.

His will granted cash bequests of $15,000 each to his brother, Harry J. Sanger of 5116 5th st. nw., and his sister, Mrs. Jennie S. Lewenthal of 1736 Columbia rd. nw.

The late Mrs. Ella Gratz Gillett of 1640 20th st. nw., who died here June 9, left an estate valued at $48,000 in cash and personal effects.

To Chauffeur, Maids

Her chauffeur, Mikel O'Mally, was bequeathed $2800, while two maids, Catherine and May McGlinn, were given $500 each. The rest of the estate will be turned over to the J. L. Crozer Hospital in Chester, Pa., for an annex, to be known as the "Alfred and Ella Gillett Memorial" for the treatment of sick and crippled children.

A nephew of the late Norman C. Brown, chief land purchasing officer for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, who died July 8 at George Washington University Hospital, yesterday petitioned District Court for letters of administration because his uncle had left no will.

The only survivors are two nephews, Norman Jay Brown and Thomas A. Brown, 3d, both of Ventnor, N. J., according to the petition, which declared Mr. Brown had left an estate of $132,881 in real estate and personal property.

Real Estate Boards Face Civil Trials

The National Association of Real Estate Boards and the Washington board must stand trial on civil charges in connection with possible antitrust law violation, Judge T. Alan Goldsborough ruled in District Court yesterday.

In his ruling on a motion for dismissal, the jurist termed "ridiculous" arguments by defense counsel that the suit should be dismissed because the boards had been found innocent of identical charges in a criminal case last month.

As a second argument, Defense Counsels William E. Leahy and Roger Whiteford pointed out that a recent action of the Washington board abolished the "code of ethics" which, the Government had contended, required board members to follow a set of fixed brokerage fees.

Prosecutor Victor H. Kramer of the Department of Justice argued that the dropping of the "code" did not constitute proof that price-rigging was not being practiced.

Immediately after Goldsborough's ruling, Kramer filed a motion to require the national association to transport from Chicago certain records for use by the Government in the forthcoming trial, date of which has not yet been set.

Criminal charges against the boards were dismissed last June 4 by District Judge Edward M. Curran who issued a judgment of acquittal.

Ex-D. C. Welfare Head Faces Divorce Suit

Robert E. Bondy, former District welfare director, was sued for divorce by his wife, Mrs. Ruth Bondy, 4827 Willet pkwy., Chevy Chase, Md.

In the suit, filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court, Mrs. Bondy contends her husband deserted her January 11, 1947. Bondy's address was given as New York City. The suit listed two children, Robert E. Bondy, jr., 24, and Mrs. Ruth E. Bondy Linwill, 27.

The couple married in 1917, according to the suit. An absolute divorce was asked.

13 Testify Before Grand Jury In Bardwell Girl's Slaying

WOMAN WITNESS—Miss Trudie Mae Stancil leaves Municipal Court after testifying before Grand Jury. She said she saw Eugene James in Rock Creek Park the day of the Carol Bardwell murder. THEY HANDLED THE BARDWELL CASE—Police officials who appeared yesterday before the grand jury in connection with the Carol Bardwell murder walk across Judiciary Square. They are (from left), Det. Railroad Crossing 'Watchwoman' Tells of Seeing James Riding Freight

A net of evidence and testimony which police believe proves that Eugene H. James was the slayer of 11-year-old Carol Bardwell, yesterday was placed before the July grand jury by 13 witnesses.

While all existing evidence apparently was presented in the June 27 Rock Creek Park murder, it was disclosed that a railroad crossing "watchwoman" insisted she saw James ride a freight car into Washington Sunday, June 27, and ride another freight out of Washington the following day.

This information, it is believed, has changed the earlier police theory that James, a Baltimore janitor, who has reportedly confessed slaying Carol, left Washington the night of the knife murder.

It would also leave unaccounted for James' whereabouts here that Sunday night.

Mrs. Hilda Wiser, employed for about 26 years as a "watchwoman" at the Pennsylvania Railroad crossing at Lanham, Md., last night told The Washington Post after she testified before the grand jury that she was positive she saw James Sunday and Monday morning.

"I could pick him out of a thousand men," she said. Mrs. Wiser, a widow about 50 years old, said she saw James riding in a low-slung coal car "about 10 o'clock that Sunday morning."

"I couldn't be positive about the time, but it was just a little before or after 10 o'clock," she said. "All I could see was the top of his shoulders and his head—but I'd know him anywhere," she said.

She saw him again, in a similar position, on a freight car heading out of Washington the following morning at 10:30," said Mrs. Wiser. "The train was moving, but we're supposed to look for hot boxes and bad axles and things like that, and we notice everything that goes on."

Mrs. Wiser said she called Washington police Tuesday, after recognizing a newspaper picture of James which was published when the janitor confessed to killing 11-year-old Martha Brill in Baltimore July 6.

The Bardwell and Brill girls were slain in an almost identical manner, slashed with knives after being surprised by their assailant. James, who has a criminal sex record, is being held in Baltimore for trial August 3 on charges of killing the Brill girl and raping and robbing a 36-year-old Baltimore housewife.

James has pleaded insanity to those charges, and through his attorney has denied the confession to the Bardwell murder which Washington police said he gave them. James also gave Washington police a diagram of the Bradwell slaying scene.

The District grand jury, before hearing Mrs. Wiser's testimony yesterday, questioned Miss Trudie Mae Stancil of 2809 15th st. nw., who later said that she saw James in Rock Creek Park the day of the murder.

Miss Stancil, who is a stenographer, was accompanied by a 2-year-old adopted child, Mary Neal, and an elderly, unidentified man.

The man was before the Grand Jury very briefly, and may have been the other witness said to have seen James in the park.

Presentation of information to the grand jury was directed by Assistant United States Attorneys Charles B. Murray and Andrew F. Oehmann.

At the end of the full-day session, Murray declined to say whether presentation of the case was complete.

Coroner First Witness

First witness into the jury room was Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who examined Carol Bardwell's body at the murder scene, near 17th st. and Colorado ave. nw. Carol was found, with her throat slashed, about three hours after she left her home at 1635 Webster st. nw.

Dr. MacDonald was followed into the grand jury by his deputy, Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, who performed the autopsy which showed that the child also had been raped. In his confession to police, James denied raping his victim.

Other witnesses included John Breen and Lucille R. Bengstrom, young couple who discovered Carol's slashed body while a neighborhood search was under way. They declined any comment to reporters.

Assistant Detective Chief Robert V. Murray, who directed the questioning of James in Baltimore on the Bardwell case, carried diagrams of the murder scene into the grand jury room, and testified for nearly an hour and a half.

Also testifying were Lieut. E. E. Scott, Inspector Joseph H. Itzel of Baltimore, and Park Police Chief Mark H. Raspberry.

The father of the murdered girl, who sat with outward calm beside the other witnesses throughout the morning, was before the grand jury for about 15 minutes when the jury reconvened after lunch.

William P. Bardwell, a Federal Trade Commission investigator, apparently was asked to describe the clothing his daughter wore the day of the slaying, and the bicycle she was riding. Police said that James described this bicycle in detail in his confession.

Clothes Tests Described

Final witness of the day was Roy H. McDaniel, special agent and laboratory expert of the FBI, who said he gave the jury testimony on tests made on the Bardwell girl's clothing.

With the testimony given the grand jury by Mrs. Wiser, to the effect that James remained in Washington overnight, it is believed that police now are seeking further witnesses in the case. It was learned yesterday that James has the nickname "Bunky," and some persons may know him only by this name.

In Baltimore yesterday three mental experts were engaged to determine James' sanity before he is placed on trial there.

Dr. Irving J. Spear and Dr. J. J. N. Cushing have been employed by the State, and Dr. Philip F. Lerner by the defense, with examinations scheduled for early next week.

Their reports will be in addition to those of Dr. Manfred S. Guttmacher, who advises the Baltimore Supreme Bench of psychiatric aspects of criminal cases.

Because of the Baltimore charges against James, it is held unlikely that James will ever be brought to trial in Washington. But if he is indicted here, and is not convicted in Baltimore, a Washington trial would follow.

Bergman Says

Schools Get Rental Edge At Armory

Educational institutions will be given a slight advantage over other groups in the renting of the Armory, Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, new Armory manager, said yesterday.

Bergman met with the three-man Armory Control Board in the office of Commissioner John Russell Young.

After the meeting Bergman said the board had decided educational institutions will be required to pay $500 a day or 15 per cent of the proceeds, whichever is greater. If they are willing to gamble on the prospect of large crowds they will be allowed to choose a flat $750-a-day rate.

Graduated Rates Set

All other organizations, Bergman said, will have their choice of a flat daily rate of $1000, a seven-day week for $5000, or an "incentive" rate of $750 a day or 15 per cent of the proceeds, whichever is greater.

Bergman said also that it had been decided there would be no racial discrimination in renting of the Armory. The question of racial segregation, he said, will be entirely up to the organizations that rent the Armory.

For the time being, Bergman said, events will continue on the present basis with boxing, tennis, track and basketball the main items. Future possibilities, he added include Metropolitan Opera, symphony concerts, summer theatrical productions, conventions, sport shows and, if practical, midget auto races.

New Stage Proposed

He said he had suggested that the three-man board permit him to have designs prepared for a permanent stage, a "knockdown" portable stage, and a layout of temporary and permanent seats. He will take the matter up with Director of Construction Archie Hudson, he revealed.

Any plan to alter the armory in order to increase its present 4825 seating capacity by providing additional exits should be deferred until stage and seating arrangements are decided upon, he said.

Prince Georges Goal Is 100 Pints of Blood

Blood donors will again have an opportunity to be of service in Prince Georges July 29 when the "bloodmobile" will visit the county Red Cross chapter at Hyatteville Elementary School. A goal of 100 pints of blood is sought. The mobile unit will be at the school from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Charter Group To File Answer In Court Today

Proponents of charter government for Montgomery County today will carry their legal fight to have the issue placed before voters, by filing an answer to a plea for injunction made four months ago by Hubert A. Schneider, Bethesda and Washington attorney.

Thomas C. Kelley, attorney representing the charter board, said the answer would be filed in the Montgomery County Circuit Court today in a move to clear legal points for a court decree either denying or granting the injunction.

If an injunction is granted, the board would be forbidden to bring the charter issue up in a referendum.

Two days ago Circuit Court Judges Charles W. Woodward and Stedman Prescott delivered an opinion that a section of the charter which would permit a County Council to adopt a budget and appropriate funds in executive session was in violation of the State constitution.

At the same time the court held that its opinion should not prevent residents from having an opportunity to vote on the charter issue if the offending section were removed.

Kelley pointed out that the court's opinion was not a final step, since a decree in the injunction issue has not yet been made.

Once the injunction case is settled, Kelley said, the charter board will plan its next move. He indicated an appeal to the appellate court would be made if an injunction is granted.

Decision on the filing of an answer was made at a meeting last night at Kelley's office

Symphony to Play Rachmaninoff, Wagner Selections

Selections from Wagner and a Rachmaninoff concerto will be presented by the National Symphony Orchestra at its 8:15 p. m. Watergate concert today.

Earl Wild, pianist, will be featured in Rachmaninoff's Concert No. 2 in C minor in the second half of the program.

Wild's overture to "Buffalo Bill" has been performed by the National Broadcasting Co. Orchestra, and his "Adventure for Piano and Orchestra" was given its premiere by the American Broadcasting Co. Symphony Orchestra.

Watergate Concerts May Meet Expense

With good weather, the Watergate concert series has a chance this year of winding up out of the red—a rarity in the decade of these summer concerts.

Board of Trade and National Symphony Association officials made this prediction yesterday with 7 of the 12 scheduled concerts remaining. The last one will be on July 30.

This year's series is being heard only by the grace of 27 well-to-do Washingtonians who threw in about $14,000 as a guarantee against a deficit. This move was engineered last May by the Board of Trade after the National Symphony Association, with a deficit of its own, announced it could no longer support the annual outdoor series.

The trade board's cultural development committee expressed hope at a monthly luncheon at the Burlington Hotel yesterday that the series could be concluded "with small or no demands at all on the guarantee fund . . ." Only favorable weather and increased interest in the concerts are needed, said Chairman George R. Titus.

J. E. Mutch, manager of the National Symphony Orchestra, said no exact financial balance is now available, but that receipts were running ahead of last year's, with about $16,000 thus far realized.

"We're sitting all right," he said, "but we need a good break in weather."

In the event of a deficit at the end of the season, the guarantors who saved the series from extinction would forfeit money in proportion to the amounts they had underwritten.

Alexandria Police yesterday sought one or more persons who stole 15 bottles of powerful drugs from an Alexandria drug store early Wednesday morning.

Inspector Russell Hawes said the theft was discovered by police when they were on a routine check of the Henderson Drug Co., 710 S. Washington st. at 3:30 a. m.

Hawes said the thieves took a large quantity of loot from the store and hid it in the courtyard of an adjoining apartment. These goods, which police recovered, included 100 cartons of cigarettes, electric fans, razors, cameras and radios.

Inspector Hawes said that the thieves had escaped with $576 in cash and 15 bottles of drugs, such as morphine, cocaine and dilaudid.

Police apprehended a Washington resident near the scene of the robbery. He is a suspect in the crime, Hawes said, but as yet has not been charged.

Group Favors Takoma Park Vote Changes

Several proposed changes in the municipal election laws of Takoma Park, Md., have been approved by the newly created Citizens Advisory Committee to amend the city charter.

Robert E. Mohr of the joint Prince Georges-Takoma Citizens Association, and also a delegate from the Takoma Chamber of Commerce, suggested at a meeting Wednesday night that residents be permitted to register in Takoma Park instead of the county seats in Upper Marlboro or Rockville, as now required by law.

He also proposed that registrants in municipal elections be bonafide residents of the city for one year, instead of three months as now required.

Although no final action was taken, the committee, headed by City Councilman W. H. McClenon as chairman, favored the following changes:

Earlier election dates which would avoid conflict with national, State and county primaries and elections.

Establishment of more than one polling place and a possible loan of voting machines from Montgomery County to replace the ballot box system.

McClenon will report on committee progress at the city council meeting Monday night. All recommendations will be acted upon by the mayor and council before they are presented to the Maryland State Legislature.

McClenon said his group will meet twice a month, the first and third Thursdays throughout the summer and most of the fall so that the amendments may be in final draft by December 1. He welcomed suggestions from citizens.

'Parade' Rests On Old Laurels

By Richard L. Coe

THE RETURN of Fred Astaire to the world of the cinema could hardly be hailed with more eclat than surrounds "Easter Parade" at the Palace.

A score by Irving Berlin, two leading ladies . . . two, Judy Garland and Ann Miller . . . and a production of extravagantly posh proportions embellish the facile Astaire taps. With a title that conjures nostalgic humming and a passel of ecstatic reviews from the New York press, "Easter Parade" undoubtedly will be a box-office bonanza from coast to coast.

The fact remains, however, that this reviewer has a good deal less than enthusiasm for "Easter Parade." The Berlin music seems to me to be from the bottom of the master's trunk and the script writers certainly took Metro's money under false pretenses. And there is virtually no comedy.

On the credit side are Astaire dances to "Drum Crazy," "It Only Happens When I Dance With You" and "Steppin' Out with My Baby"; Ann Miller's "Shakin' the Blues Away"; Judy Garland's genial stepping and singing in "A Fella With an Umbrella" and "Michigan," and the neat teamwork of Astaire and Judy.

But to get at these tidbits, one must bear the banalities of the plot. This is the backstage one of a dance team in which A loves B but B thinks A loves C and D keeps getting in the way. Exactly why the movie-makers have become so enamoured of this trite situation may be ascribed either to laziness or cynicism, I haven't been able to determine which.

Furthermore, I've had just about all I can stand of the good old days as they're depicted in the movies. Just how Fred's former dancing partner can right off the bat get her name in lights twice the size of those over the New Amsterdam for the Ziegfeld Follies baffles me, and I don't see why Fred's new partner (Miss Garland) wouldn't know anything about Fred's torch-carrying in a profession that's always rife with gossip.

All this wouldn't be so bad if it weren't treated with the solemnity of French II giving a performance of "Aucassin and Nicolette." Even the blithe styles of Astaire and Judy aren't enough to cope with the cliche parade devised by Writers Sidney Sheldon, Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett. As angle C to the quadrangle, Ann Miller is forced to be pretty foolish, and as angle D Peter Lawford has to make believe he has nothing on his mind but predatory urges, erratically spaced, toward Miss Miller and Miss Garland.

That this four-angled romance is given so much attention and comedy hardly a look-in (Jules Munshin has a bit as a haughty maitre de), seems an indication that Producer Arthur Freed felt that his stars could cover his show without anyone bothering too much in the creative line.

The dances are pleasant, thanks to the top trio, but for sheer inventiveness they don't hold a candle to those of "The Pirate." There's a good deal of activity for Fred, but it doesn't work up to anything much in the way of production. His films with Ginger Rodgers remain Astaire at his best.

All in all, "Easter Parade" seems to me to promise more than it gives.

FROM REHOBOTH BEACH come good reports of the newly-formed Henlopen Playhouse summer company from this quarter's vacationing Orval Hopkins . . . The comedy, writes the Whistle Stopper, is "Separate Rooms," with Ann Corio in the role Anna Sten once played on the stage of the National (Glenda Farrell created it in New York) . . . The opening was to "an enthusiastic house" the lithe stripper was very nicely received and Richard Briggs, who once worked out at Olney, if memory serves, got a big hand for his playing of the columnist who is down on women . . . "Separate Rooms" will continue through this week and next . . . It looks as though Impresario Norma MacHardy had a bright idea when she pushed through her dream of a cabana playhouse for this resort so popular with Washingtonians.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S second offering of its summer season will be W. S. Gilbert's "Engaged" . . . Yup, it's the Gilbert of the light opera team, but this is one of his efforts independent of Sullivan . . . You may have seen it some summers ago out at the old Roadside . . . Dick Sykes heads the C. U. company which opens its week's run Sunday night . . . Seats at Michigan 6000, Ext. 358.

THERE aren't many practitioners of the fine old art of slapstick working these days, but Abbott and Costello fans know they can rely on Bud and Lou. The comics arrived yesterday on the Metropolitan screen in a goodish example of their hearty style, "The Noose Hangs High." If you're not an A. and C. fan, this one isn't for you; if you are, you know about what to expect.

This one finds the boys mistaken for messengers by a rough type who runs a bookie setup. They have trouble delivering 50 grand, get mixed up with Joseph Calleia and Mike Mazurki, but find two friends in Cathy Downs and Leon Errol.

Things get started very nicely when the boys go into their window-washing routine. Like many of their succeeding gags, this is familiar but remains good fun; the boys have a habit of working a routine till it's dry, but then who's kicking when there are a few laughs around?

No, it's not for the sophisticates, but the youngsters will get a lot of laughs from "The Noose Hangs High," a title, by the way, which doesn't mean a thing. R. L. C.

Cab Driver Held In Attempt to Bribe Policeman

Freddie H. Austin, 31, a part-time cab driver, of 2917 12th st. ne., yesterday was ordered held under $500 bond in Municipal Court for grand jury action on a charge of bribing a police officer.

Police said that Austin was arrested Thursday evening for speeding at Rhode Island ave. and Lincoln rd. ne., by Pvt. Clifton L. Fones, a motorcycle man of the Traffic Division.

Austin offered Fenes $10 to forget the charge and gave him $5 of it that night, Fones reported at the Twelfth Precinct. Austin promised to pay Fones the other $5 Friday night, police said.

Fones took a Traffic Division sergeant in plain clothes with him to meet Austin Friday night at 12th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne., police said. Austin was arrested when he handed Fones the second $5.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—The scramble for July corn by shorts in that contract grew a little more feverish today. At one time July was up 4 cents on the Board of Trade. The closing price showed a gain of more than 3 cents.

Except for July corn, the market was quiet. Northwestern mills supported deferred wheat deliveries. Oats held steady on prospect of rains in the Midwest, which would delay harvesting. Rye staged a technical comeback and soybeans tumbled once again.

Wheat closed 1½ lower to ⅝ higher, July 2.27⅝; corn was ⅞ lower to 3½ higher, July 2.12@2.11¼; oats were 1⅛-1⅜ higher, July 90@90⅛; rye was 1 cent higher, December 1.88⅜; and soybeans were 5¾-7½ lower, July 3.80.

The departments quoted net auction sales for Wednesday at 304,222 pounds, averaging $43.27 per hundredweight. This was $1.19 above Tuesday's average price.

Net auction sales for the season were brought to 20,721,932 at an average of $43.24 per 100.

Neighbor's Ladder Saves Three in Fire

Three persons, one of them a 60-year-old woman, clambered down a ladder supplied by a neighbor early yesterday to escape a fire which gutted a combined tavern and dwelling in nearby Prince Georges County.

The fire, which caused damage estimated at more than $15,000, razed the interior of Detta's Musical Bar at 6254 Marlboro pike, near Hillside, destroying furnishings and stocks of liquor and food. An apartment on the second floor of the building was damaged by smoke and water only, but its occupants were temporarily trapped when smoke and flames blocked the stairway to the only exit.

In the apartment when the blaze was discovered were the owner, Kenneth T. Showers, 37; his mother, Mrs. Ethel Showers Thomas, 60, and a woman who, according to firemen, was an employe of the tavern who roomed there.

The fire was discovered about 8:30 a. m. by Mrs. Thomas, who roused the other occupants. On finding the stairway blocked, Showers ran to a bedroom window and called for help from a neighbor, Bruce Hoile, whose home is only 200 feet away from the tavern.

Hoile provided a 30-foot ladder and the occupants climbed down unassisted.

Showers said the loss was fully covered by insurance.

5-Hour Session Here Gets Off To Brisk Start

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Washington Stock Exchange got off to a brisk start yesterday on its extended trading hours for the dually listed issues.

Between noon and 3 p. m., 1401 shares were transacted. These are hours during which the local exchange formerly was not open. Before yesterday, this turnover would have been shifted to New York because the local market was open only between 11:15 a. m. and noon. New hours are 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Afternoon trading yesterday was in two issues; Washington Gas Light Co. common and Potomac Electric Power Co. common. New bid and asked prices were posted for other dually listed shares.

The smooth operation of the five-hour session was attributed to painstaking preparatory work by President Bernard J. Nees. He was on the floor all day to get the new setup operating, but customarily Ralph J. Saffell, newly elected assistant secretary, will handle the work. Members will continue to meet from 11:15 a. m. to noon for trading in strictly local issues, but will execute orders by phone the rest of the time.

Consensus of members was that the first day of longer hours demonstrates the potential additional turnover and service to the public and brokers. The innovation is expected to enhance the value of the local exchange to the investing community.

In connection with the launching of the five-hour sessions, exchange members were advised that the governing committee had adopted a resolution stating that commission rates "shall be not less than the rate prevailing on the other New York exchanges on which the dually listed stocks are traded."

Tribe Boosts Lead to 2½ Games, Beating A's 6-1, 8-5

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

GEORGE P. MARSHALL is making noises again, and it's the same old theme—call off the All-Star football game, or at least keep his Redskins out of it. The evidence is that he won't get to the line of scrimmage with his favorite squawk.

POVICH

He doesn't like Arch Ward, the Chicago Tribune sports editor who runs the game. He doesn't like the game itself. He doesn't like his players in it, risking injury. He doesn't like etc., etc. . . .

For that matter, Ward doesn't like Marshall either and to those who do like Marshall, Mr. Ward says happily, "he's your friend and thine . . ."

It's another case of Marshall overmatching himself. That has happened before, you know. He doesn't have a ghost of a chance of disrupting Ward's game, and as for keeping out of it the four Redskin rookies, including Harry Gilmer, who were invited to play, I don't like his chances on that count, either.

Any day now, Mr. Bert Bell, who is the Commissioner of the National Football of which Marshall isn't the commissioner, will tell the Redskins' boss to stop bleating about the All-Star game.

MARSHALL SAYS he has filed a formal protest with Bell. It won't get him anything. Sports Editor Ward is a fore-handed fellow. He has protected himself, the game and the National Football League against the kind of protests Marshall is making and can throw a powerful legal block at the Marshall plan.

Ward has a contract for the game with the National Football League that extends through 1951, and that takes care of Marshall's effort to call the game off. And anyway, it's too profitable a business for the NFL to throw out the window. What would George Halas, owner of the Bears' say? He netted something like $56,000 out of the All-Star game last season and what he might say to Marshall would be deep purple in hue.

Ward's game offers a bigger financial dividend to the NFL champion team than even their own title game. There's precious little support among the other club owner's for the indulgence of a personal peeve by Marshall against Ward to an amount like $56,000. And in addition to the take of the pro champions, the league itself last year got 6 per cent of the gate or something like $16,000.

AS TO MARSHALL'S objection to his Redskin players participating in the game, he'll probably be thrown for a loss on that one, too. He ought to read the full contract that Ward holds with the National Football League. It has a special clause dealing with that kind of objection and the four Redskins who were invited will play despite Marshall's protests—or else.

The "or else" is the agreement Ward holds with the NFL that "any players owned by the National League who are invited to play in the game and do not participate will be ineligible to play in National Football League exhibitions." That means any players Marshall withholds from the games can't play for the Redskins in the profitable preseason games at Los Angeles, Denver, Birmingham or Baltimore.

It's something to whip Marshall into line quickly. If his instransigeance is so deep he won't let 'em play for Ward, the city of Birmingham will probably declare war, and Marshall had best keep out of its path. It is because of their boy Gilmer's presence in the lineup that a tremendous advance sale has been made for the Redskins' exhibition game against the Packers in Birmingham, on September 11. No Gilmer, no game, no doubt.

MARSHALL SAYS the Redskin players invited don't want to play in the game, but there must be some doubt about that. Gilmer, when originally invited, wrote Ward of his high satisfaction at the honor and declared he long had hoped to play in an All-Star game. End Sid Halliday of the Redskins accepted gladly. A bit later, Gilmer wrote Ward asking that a special insurance policy be provided him to cover any injuries he might suffer and compensate him for the length of his Redskin contract.

Gilmer is a valuable chattel of the Redskins who have a big investment in him. But the National Football League owes much of it's success to Ward's All-Star game. It was the greatest single shot-in-the-arm to the popularity of pro football, starting back in 1934 when the game was originated. At that time, pro football was struggling to make ends meet. Ward helped tremendously to make it a big league sport.

He's gone farther than that. Without any obligation to do so in its contract with the NFL, the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. last year bought at much expense from Lloyd's of London an insurance policy that covers all players and would pay such as Gilmer a maximum of $8000 if he were hurt in the Chicago game. For hurt feelings of any clubowners, however, there is no provision.

Braves Win, 2-1; Play 13 Innings, 1-1

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—The Boston Braves nosed out the Chicago Cubs, 2 to 1, in the opening game of a double-header today for their fifth straight victory before 38,339. However, they were held to a 1-1 tie in the nightcap which was halted by darkness after 13 innings.

Johnny Sain registered his twelfth victory by scattering seven hits. The lone run off him came in the seventh inning when Andy Pafko, who collected three hits, singled and tallied on Phil Cavarretta's triple.

The Braves scored both of their runs off Ralph Hamner in the first inning. Hamner was around long enough to face only four batters. He walked Tommy Holmes and Alvin Dark on eight pitches. Holmes tallied on Earl Torgeson's single. When Bob Elliott also drew a pass, Emil Kush was rushed in from the bullpen. Then Jeff Heath greeted Kush with a fly to center to score Dark.

Kush then held the Braves at bay for eight innings and Dutch McCall and Hank Browy stopped them in the ninth.

In the nightcap Bob Rush, rookie right-hander, went the route for the Cubs, allowing 11 hits, while Boston's Bill Voiselle yielded to Nelson Potter during the ninth.

The Braves scored an unearned run in the third when Connie Ryan doubled, was safe at third when Pafko dropped Gene Mauch's throw and scored during a double play. The Cubs scored in the fifth on a double by Cavaretta and "Rube" Walker's single.

The hitting streak of Alvin Dark, Boston's brilliant rookie shortstop, was stopped at 23 games. Dark went hitless in the first game in four official times at the plate. He singled once in the second game in six attempts.

Yankees Beat Browns, 4-2, Crowd Second

New York, July 15 (AP).—The New York Yankees pounded Fred Sanford for 11 hits including triples by Cliff Mapes and George McQuinn as they beat the St. Louis Browns tonight, 4 to 2. Whitey Platt homered with one aboard in the fifth inning for the St. Louis runs.

Sanford suffered his ninth setback and fourth at the hands of the Yanks whom he has not beaten this year.

A crowd of 33,887 saw the game.

Ghezzi's 66 Leads Tourney

Pittsburgh, July 15 (AP).—Big Vic Ghezzi of Englewood, N. J., blasted par by six strokes for a 66 today to take a three-stroke lead in the first 18-hole round of the 72-hole $16,500 Dapper Dan invitational golf tournament.

Four others were bunched in second place with 69's as par took a beating from the regular tournament riders now firing on Alcoma Country Club's rolling fairways.

The second-place deadlock existed among Dr. Cary Middlecoff, golfing dentist of Memphis, Tenn.; Ellsworth Vines, Los Angeles; Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., and George Fazio of Conshohocken, Pa.

A stroke back with 70's were Lloyd Mangrum of Niles, Ill., second and fanking money winner among the touring pros; E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Albuquerque, N. Mex., and a home product, Carl Beljan of Johnstown, Pa.

Seven more were bunched with 71's. They were Felix Serafin of Pittston, Pa.; George Schoux of Mamaroneck, N. J.; Ed Furgol of Pontiac, Mich.; Bill Nary of Phoenix, Ariz.; Toby Lyons of Warren, Pa.; Mike Pavella of Washington, Pa., and Pavella's assistant pro, Paul Giovan.

The tournament is spread over four days of 18-hole rounds. The low 60-plus ties after tomorrow will gun for the top honors Saturday and Sunday.

Senior Links Crown Won by J. S. Brookes

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

John S. Brookes, jr., of the host club shot a 39—37—76 to win the Middle Atlantic Golf Association Senior Championship yesterday at Burning Tree Club.

Brookes thus inherited the title held since 1947 by Roger Whiteford, also of Burning Tree. For his triumph, Brookes was awarded the Walter McCallum Memorial Trophy.

Right behind the winner was John R. Miller of Manor, who, but for a double-bogey 6 on the 435-yard eighteenth hole would have captured the top prize. Miller, needing a 4 for a 75, put his second shot in a trap to the left of the green. His shot out of the trap landed on the apron, and he chipped up 3 feet short of the hole.

His putt barely missed and he had to be content with a 77. He was awarded the low gross prize in the 55-59 age group.

The Hinshaw Trophy for the low net score went to 76-year-old Clarence N. Goodwin of Congressional, who shot his best round of the year, a 94—26—68.

Dr. Noah Pomeroy of Kenwood received the Tuckerman Cup for the oldest player in the tournament. The 77-year-old golfer shot a 97—14—83.

Prizes in Groups

Other prizes went to Ned Burnham of Burning Tree, low net in the 55-59 group with a 78—6—72. Elmer Jenkins of Congressional, low gross in the 60-64 bracket with an 81, and R. L. Webb, Country Club of Maryland, low net in the same group with 84—12—72.

Walter R. Tuckerman of Burning Tree won the low gross prize in the 65 70 group with an 83 and R. P. Whitely of Chevy Chase took the low net award in this division with 97—14—83. The putting prize for members of the association who did not take part in the tournament went to Dr. Robert A. Keilty, secretary of the group, whose prowess frightened all rivals away.

Leonard Halts Cards, Phils Win, 3 to 1

St. Louis, July 15 (AP).—Del Ennis' 13th home run with Ralph Caballero on base provided Dutch Leonard the margin he needed to beat the St. Louis Cardinals tonight, 3 to 1. It was the Redbirds' sixth defeat in seven games and snapped a seven-game losing streak for the Phils.

Bell Withholds All-Star Comment Until Meeting

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—Commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League today answered with "no comment" questions concerning yesterday's blast by Owner George P. Marshall of the Washington Redskins against the NFL's participation in the annual Collegiate All-Star game in Chicago August 20.

A spokesman for the commissioner said the problem would "be discussed Sunday as the professional circuit stages its annual mid-summer conference in Philadelphia." The same spokesman was unaware Marshall had filed a formal protest against the game as Marshall claimed in a Washington interview Wednesday.

Other business to be considered Sunday, it was revealed, are the five-year cycle plan for scheduling games, and probable opening dates for the 1949 season.

Pressure of Business

Augusterfer Quits C. U. Post; Chisari Probable Successor

Gene Augusterfer, relatively successful coach in three sports at Catholic University, yesterday resigned because of business pressure.

Augusterfer's amateurs—there's no such thing as an athletic scholarship at C. U.—broke even in football, basketball and won 8 of 15 baseball games, including two upsets of powerful Georgetown.

It was learned last night that the football coaching post probably will be awarded to Tom Chisari, hard-working assistant to Augusterfer.

Athletic Director Eddie LaFond wouldn't confirm the report but said he considered Chisari a capable, loyal coach. LaFord said he would make a decision within a week or 10 days and admitted that Chisari has an excellent chance of being chosen.

Chisari's lone handicap seems to be his age—or lack of it. Only 25, he assisted Augusterfer last season at Catholic U. and was with him the year before at St. John's.

He was graduated from Maryland in 1947 and was a fullback and blocking back under Doc Spears and Paul Bryant. Chisari attended St. John's here and was an All-Metropolitan back in 1941.

Augusterfer said he's stepping out because his restaurant and night club ventures are taking too much of his time. He emphasized, however, that he was quitting coaching ranks only temporarily.

Chisari, or whoever is named, will have last year's squad intact to face an eight-game schedule that includes Patuxent Naval Air Base, Western Maryland, Johns Hopkins, Lock Haven, Pa., Teachers, Randolph-Macon, Mount St. Mary's, Washington College and Newport News Apprentice School.

4-1 Victory

Scarborough Ends Streak, Whips Chisox

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The White Sox easily extended their latest losing streak to seven in a row last night and at the same time snapped the personal losing streak of Ray Scarborough.

Scarborough, who hasn't won a game since June 7—Chicago was the victim, then, too—elbowed the Nats to a 4-to-1 decision over the tail-enders.

The series opener between the sixth and eighth place clubs stimulated little interest among Washington's baseball fans, as only 5613 were around for the show.

In notching his sixth victory against five setbacks, Scarborough held the cellar dwellers to seven hits, one less than the Nats got. One of the Nat hits was a single by Mark Christman, enabling him to carry his batting streak through his eleventh game.

One of the blows he yielded robbed him of a shutout. Tony Lupien's homer in the third inning. Ray was wild, too, passing five of the Hose, but he had it in the clutch, leaving a dozen of the visitors stranded. He also fanned five.

The victim of the Washington's second straight success was Southpaw Bill Wight, a former Yankee. Wight was touched for seven of the eight Nat safeties and all four runs during his six-inning stewardship. His successor, Bob Gillespie, was nicked for the final safety, an eighth inning double which was wasted.

Scarborough himself scored as many runs as the White Sox. The curve-balling righthander swatted a hefty triple to left field in the third inning and romped in to tie the score when Junior Wooten unloaded one of his two singles.

Al Kozar knocked in the big run in the next frame, hoisting a long fly to Pat Seerey to left which enabled Tom McBride to score what proved to be the winning run. McBride reached third on a walk, Christman's single and Al Evans' sacrifice.

Scores Two Runs

To complete the scoring, Carden Gillenwater smacked a two-run single in the fifth. His timely blow delivered Eddie Yost and Earl Wooten, each of whom did respectable leg work to set up the tallies. Yost walked and went to third on Wooten's bingle into short right. When Taft Wright tried to nail Yost at third, Wooten scooted to second. Both scurried home on Gillenwater's single and that was all the Nat runs.

The Sox frequently threatened to chase Scarborough, but never could come up with the hit when they needed it. Pat Seerey failed them three times, ending threats each time by striking out. In the third he fanned with one aboard and in the fifth he took a third strike with one aboard.

In the ninth, however, the big blonde upped his futility by striking out with two on base to wind up the game.

Schimps' Homer Wins

Ed Schimps' three-run homer in the second carried Ourisman's to a 3-2 softball triumph over Urso yesterday in a Playground League No. 5 game.

Couple of Castoffs Oppose Each Other

Former Nat Chico Pieretti and former Chisox Earl Harrist will be the opposing pitchers for tonight's second game in the current Washington-Chicago series at Griffith Stadium.

It will be the first start of the year for Harrist, who has won three and lost none in relief roles for the Nats. Pieretti has a 2-3 record since joining the White Sox, one being a decision over the Nats.

Harrist was sent to the Nats last month in exchange for Pieretti. Both are right handers.

Ken Keltner, Paige Pace Win in 2d

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—Ageless Leroy (Satchel) Paige scored his first major league victory tonight as the league leading Cleveland Indians swept a double header from the Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 1 and 8 to 5.

Ken Keltner's twenty-first home run in the eighth inning broke a 5-5 tie in the second game and enabled Cleveland to increase its first place margin to 2½ games.

A capacity crowd of almost 40,000 jammed every corner of Shibe Park with a police-estimated 20,000 others turned away.

Steve Gromek turned back the A's with a neat four-hitter and only Rosar's homer in the fourth kept him from gaining a shutout in the first game. Phil Marchildon went the first seven innings and was charged with all the Indian runs. Charley Harris pitched two innings of hitless relief ball.

Cleveland broke up a tight pitching duel in the fifth inning with a four-run outburst. Dale Mitchell doubled to open the frame and scored on Larry Doby's single. After Edwards walked, Boudreau sacrificed to advance both runners. Gordon was intentionally passed, loading the bases. Ken Keltner then smashed a double to left scoring Doby and Edwards. Gordon came home on an infield out.

Ed Robinson's single and a Gordon double accounted for Cleveland's first run in the second. Edwards' circuit clout came in the third.

Anna Hal Wins Laurel Pace

After two nights of postponement due to rain, Laurel Raceway resumed its harness racing last night as an estimated 12,000 saw Anna Hal, an 8-year-old black mare, driven by Tom Walters, capture the feature.

Winner of her last start, she had to stage a garrison finish to beat out E. H. Grimes' In Command and returned a $15.60, $6.20 and $4.60 mutuel across the board.

Walters turned the heat on after racing second to In Command virtually all the way. Within 50 yards of the finish line, Anna Hal came on with a

Baby Pauly Disqualified In 1st Race

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Havre de Grace, Md., July 15.—Tacaro Briar, owned by Robert L. Hall, jr. of Marlboro, Md., turned on the stretch heat today and ran off with the St. Swithin purse.

The busy campaigner—this was his fourth victory this year in a dozen tries—finished three parts of a length in front of R. E. Carter's Oriole. Six lengths back came the Pentagon Stable's The Doge to be third, a length and a half ahead of E. C. Allnutt's Meetmenow, the only other starter after the Greentree Stable's Blue Border was scratched.

Tacaro Briar, running over a track termed slow, was clocked in a good 1:14 4/5 for the six fur longs. The courageous son of Neddie returned a $5.40 mutuel as the favorite with a crowd of 7000 who saw racing under clear skies and with a cooling breeze coming in off nearby Chesapeake Bay.

The victory was worth $2600 to the Hall barn and brought Tacaro Briar's 1948 earnings to a healthy $16,250.

Confusion marked the opening race. Mrs. V. D. Waple's Baby Pauly won by 2 lengths but was disqualified and placed fourth. The 3-year-old had a four-length lead and seemed on the way to an easy victory when he shied and bolted 70 yards from the finish line. In doing so, he bumped Mrs. C. A. Carlino's Kentmere Miss.

The stewards made the objection and the disqualification was a mere formality.

Baby Pauly was placed fourth, with victory going to R. B. Archer's Hi Pi, a lightly played favorite, who was a neck in front of A. P. Duer's Orestone. The latter was judged second, with Kentmere Miss moving into the show money.

Hi Pi paid $6.80 and was clocked in 1:49 2-5 for the mile and 70 yards.

Mules Were Cause

Immediately after the race, when the front-running Baby Pauly bolted and almost knocked Kentmere Miss off her feet, Starter Eddie Blind called the stewards on the intertrack phone and reported that Baby Pauly had shied from the four mules who pull the starting gate into the centerfield.

The officials had to take action nevertheless and Baby Pauly was placed fourth after finishing in front of her field. The disqualification was expected by everyone who witnessed the race and certainly was justified, although Kentmere Miss moved up only from fourth to third.

Trout Extension Fools Anglers

Shenandoah Season Definitely Closed

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

WORD HAS REACHED us that a lot of anglers still are unaware that the fishing season in Shenandoah National Park officially ended July 10.

Reason for their confusion is easily understandable. Virginia extended its State trout season from July 31 to September 15 and too many fishermen are assuming that the national park season has been prolonged, too.

This column carried notice of the closing but it bears repetition. It certainly does when you consider that fishing on national park property now is judged a misdemeanor. And maximum penalty is a $500 fine or six months' imprisonment.

Victor H. Cahalane, chief of the wildlife program for the National Park Service, said the regular closing date was observed because of necessity.

"The streams would be completely fished out if we extended the season," said Cahalane. "Every summer we get dry spells when the water level drops. This causes fish to congregate in pools and means they may be caught with little or no effort.

"Our purpose is to provide fishing for the sport of it. It would be defeated if we didn't keep a close watch on conditions and didn't observe our fishing dates."

Many are of the opinion that Virginia extended its trout season merely to placate irate anglers who have had to pay increased license fees.

AROUND OCEAN CITY, MD., they're still talking about the unbelievable marlin catch by Paul Skelly, 5422 2d st. nw., Washington. Skelly's 99-pound marlin was the largest taken last week and it has a good chance of being the season's top catch.

The amazing part of this fish story is that it practically caught itsef. Skelly played the 7-foot 11-inch fish for about five minutes while it made three jumps. Then his line broke.

By that time the Washingtonian had reeled out about 200 yards of line. The marlin, unaware that the line was broken, kept thrashing about and its tail became entangled in the line.

Capt. Bill Burbage, who skippers the Cecil, quickly turned the craft around when the line gave way and came back to the marlin. Miraculously, the end was picked out of the water and tied to Skelly's rod again.

Virginia Lengthens Period by 6 Weeks

Two hours and 40 minutes later, Skelly pulled in his marlin which had drowned. And the fish didn't have a hook in its mouth—it was held securely by the line wrapped around its tail!

Captain Burbage said, "I have tried many a time to tie a line on after it was broken, but this is the first time it ever worked. I never would have believed it could be done if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes."

Skelly, 33-year-old printer, was in town yesterday and said he had been out twice since his phenomenal catch but hadn't sighted a thing. Fishing with him were his brother, Francis, 31, 5113 7th st. nw., and Francis McCarthy, New Jersey and L st. The trio's heading right back to Ocean City today.

STAY-AT-HOMES have a chance to witness an interesting casting tournament Sunday at the Reflecting Pool right by Lincoln Memorial. The National Capital Casting Club is sponsoring its midsummer tournament and entries from as far away as Pittsburgh, Pa., and Paterson, N. J., have been received. Events will run from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Lee McLaughlin, Walden Promoted At Episcopal High

Giant Lee McLaughlin, line coach at Episcopal High of Alexandria for three years, yesterday was named head football coach. He succeeds Bus Male, who resigned last May to take a freshman coaching job at University of Virginia.

Coincident with McLaughlin's appointment was the promotion of Syd Walden from assistant basketball coach to head coach of that sport.

McLaughlin was All-State tackle at John Marshall High of Richmond in 1935, and gained similar honors at the University of Virginia in 1940. The 240-pounder played tackle for the pro Green Bay Packers in 1941, serving in the Navy from '42 through '44.

Walden, a high school teammate of McLaughlin, played guard on the Hampden-Sydney basketball teams of 1939 and '40. He was head football coach at Virginia Episcopal High of Roanoke in 1945 and moved to Episcopal of Alexandria the next year. He served as football backfield coach and assistant basketball coach to Male.

NOTICE OF SALE—THE NATIONAL Capital Housing Authority, herein referred to as the "Authority," will offer for sale and removal from the site four portable houses located at the following addresses in Washington, D. C.: 49 K Street S.E., 51 K Street S.E., 1002 Half Street S.E., 1711 14th Street N.E. The above houses are of the portable (removable in panels) type consisting of living room, two bedrooms, kitchen and bath (toilet, washbowl and shower). They are of temporary construction, do not meet with the District of Columbia building requirements and are not suitable for long term residential use. They are, however, adaptable for vacation-type summer housing, tourist cabins, migratory seasonal farm labor, and non-residential use. Prospective purchasers contemplating any use of the houses other than nonresidential are advised to first clear with the proper authorities within the area in question concerning such use. Applications for the purchase of these houses in sealed envelopes marked "Application for Purchase of Portable House" will be received until 3 p. m. on the 23rd day of July, 1948, in the Legal Office of the National Capital Housing Authority, 1737 L Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., when they will be publicly opened. The houses will be sold for cash only. Fifty dollars (money order or certified check) must be enclosed as a deposit with the offer to purchase. This deposit shall not apply as a part of the purchase price, but shall be held by the Authority to insure compliance by the purchaser of the terms of the sale and removal contract, and not to exceed twenty-five dollars ($25.00) thereof shall accrue to the authority to reimburse it for capping the sewer and water systems. The balance of the deposit shall be returned to the purchaser upon satisfactory completion of the sales contract. Deposits will be returned to unsuccessful bidders. The authority reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any informalities in connection therewith. The sale of the houses is subject to the following terms, conditions and priorities: 1. Only one house will be sold to any one bidder. 2. The successful bidders upon notification shall enter into a sale and removal contract with the Authority embodying the terms and conditions of this proposal. 3. The successful bidder shall be required to remove the house at his own expense within fourteen (14) days from the date of notification so to do by the Authority. The site shall be left clear of all building material and debris. Any excavations, holes or ruts, made or resulting from the removal, shall be filled in and levelled off. In the event that the house is not removed and the site restored within the prescribed time, the sales and removal contract shall be considered breached, and the Authority reserves the right to consider the purchase price forfeited and remove and dispose of the house without recourse by the purchaser. The deposit balance shall be treated as stated above. 4. Successful bidders shall be determined in the following order of priority: a. Government agencies. b. State and local governments. c. Nonprofit institutions. d. Individual consumers. (1) Veterans of World War II and Servicemen. (2) All others. Documentary evidence that a prospective bidder is an eligible purchaser within the above classifications shall be furnished the Authority. In the event of tie bids within the priority classification, the Authority will draw lots to determine the award. The applicable definition of Veterans of World War II and any further information can be obtained at the Legal Office of the Authority, 1737 L Street, N.W. WM. R. SIMPSON, Jr., General Counsel. WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JULY 16, 1948

THE garden is one of the most interesting places on her Maryland farm for Mrs. Millard Tydings. Most of the food for the household is raised there and Mrs. Tydings does much of the work herself. An ancient and beautiful wisteria arbor (seen in the background) separates the vegetable plots from the flower garden and the house.

Mrs. Tydings Serves Famed Maryland Food With Modern Overtones

This is the sixth of a series of articles on regional cookery, featuring favorite recipes and menus of congressional wives and menus.

By Lucia Brown

FAMED in song and story is the good life—and the good food—of the spacious and hospitable country homes of oldtime Maryland.

Just such a place, brought up to date, is Oakington, the farm of Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, located at a point where rolling land tranquilly meets the upper Chesapeake Bay near Havre de Grace.

The house is an old one of stone, but it has been made comfortable and modern by the building of wings, a flagstone terrace and other additions. An air of ancient calm surrounds its 150-year-old boxwood hedges and wisteria arbor, but a tractor tills the neighboring fields and the most modern methods are used in raising its livestock. Inside the house, life moves pleasantly and graciously, but the tempo is a busy one. And, though food served on its table often features traditional Maryland dishes, they're modern versions of the old recipes, prepared in an all-electric kitchen.

First surveyed in 1659 for Colonel Nathaniel Utie, the Oakington farm was bought by Senator Tydings about 15 years ago. He and his bride, the daughter of former Ambassador to Russia Joseph E. Davies, moved there shortly after their marriage in early 1936 and have made it their home ever since except for stays in Washington when Congress is in session.

Standing on a peninsula formed where the Susquehanna River flows into the Chesapeake, the old house faces the Aberdeen Proving Grounds down the bay. During the war, Mrs. Tydings says, it was like living on the edge of a blitz, for shells and other ammunition tried out by the Army were constantly exploding in and over the bay.

Interested in Farming

NOW all is calm and serene at Oakington again, with the beautiful tree-shaded lawn sloping down to a small stone wharf where the family and their friends enjoy swimming, fishing and boating in the summer. This spot is the particular delight of Mrs. Tyding's children by a former marriage, who are now home from school for the holidays. Eleanor attends Garrison Forest, near Baltimore. Joe, who served two years in the Army and is a student at the University of Maryland, is spending a good deal of time on the farm tractor this summer, but still gets in a swim every day.

Both Senator and Mrs. Tydings are very interested in practical farming and have taken great pride in developing Oakington. The specialty of the farm is raising pedigreed Hampshire hogs, but there are also beef cattle, dairy cows and other livestock on the place. The garden is Mrs. Tydings' particular province. The flower garden, surrounded by the aged box, is a beautiful one, and all the vegetables for the table are raised in the adjoining vegetable garden.

Practically all the food for the household is, in fact, raised on the

ONE of the loveliest of Maryland farms is Oakington, the home of Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings on the Chesapeake Bay near Havre de Grace. Located on a land grant first surveyed in 1659, the Colonial house has been remodeled several times through the years. It was bought by the Senator 15 years ago and has been the home of the Tydings ever since their marriage

Louise Gore to Do Column On Washington's Young Set

By Marie McNair

THE doings of Washington's young set, their romances, their activities, what they wear and where they go, will have a place in Park East, New York magazine which covers the activities of New York's fashionable East Side.

Author of the Washington column is Louise Gore, Mr. and Mrs. H. Grady Gore's peppy daughter, whose byline will appear for the first time in the midsummer issue off the presses next week.

Louise went to school in New York—was graduated from Finch Junior College and later attended Bennington College. For the last several months she's been head of the Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and Pennsylvania area of the Finch School drive to raise half a million dollars for a new building. She did find time, however, to get to Philadelphia for both the Republican and Democratic conventions which she covers in her first column.

Park East, sold by subscription only, is strictly a "society" mag. Recently enlarging its scope, it now contains newsy reports from Palm Beach, Pasadena and Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Boston. Eventually the publishers hope to go further afield with the idea that subscribers, no matter where they may be, will be able to get home town news.

Americana—Ridiculous, Superb

Bedlam's at Its Best as Frightened Doves Swoop Over Convention Hall

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

Philadelphia

CONVENTION HALL NOMINATION NIGHT—Bedlam at its best—under one roof a slice of Americana, with all its most exciting ingredients—ridiculous and superb—in this wonderfully vital, wonderfully childish young country. Fifteen thousand people dunked eight hours straight in 90-degree heat, still shouting, screaming, booing . . . thousands of grown men and women, strewn with shiny badges, shaking rattles, pounding toy drums, batting balloons, shoving a live donkey through the hot tangle . . . up on the platform a spew of half-heard oratory . . . an Indian Chief warwhooping into the mike . . . politicians, faces plastered gruesomely with orange makeup, behind row after row of American nabobs . . . women with bare shoulders, outrageous hats, a sparkle of stones.

On the platform the country's boss, impeccably white suited, in fighting mood, pausing before a hard-bitten speech, while a flock of frightened doves swoosh out from an absurd gigantic floral bell. The hall emptying swiftly, like water sucked down a drain . . . disheveled crowds stepping ankle deep through paper litter, past hot dog stands, past barkers peddling jimcrack souvenirs, past newsboys yelling headlines . . . crowds, their fight dissolved in weariness, in happiness at playing their part in the great American show.

HIGH AND LOW SPOTS: When the Mississippi delegation took a powder, thereby creating a new American expression "Do a Mississippi" . . . when the Confederate Flag was waved by a frantic diehard . . . at 2 a. m., when a hot spectator hung his shoeless white socked feet over the balcony rail . . . when Nebraska committeeman announced proudly his State had more miles of water than any other . . . funny signs popping up like blisters "Brooklyn Always Loyal to Democracy—Keep Human With Truman"—the laugh when Paul McNutt received a half vote . . . the New York delegates bursting out in Uncle Sam hats.

The delegate blithely shooting off blank cartridges . . . shiny domed chairman, Sam Rayburn, shooing away a persistent white dove which circled, returned . . . Wilson Wyatt captivating his feminine audience with televised yellow face, bright green bow tie . . . Jim Farley sitting Buddawise on the platform scowling, summoning minions, issuing sotto voce commands . . . Senator Scott Lucas' spring green suit, Clark Clifford's autumn brown ditto . . . the Mississippi walkouts huddling in the hall telling their plan to rendezvous in Birmingham Saturday.

Miss Frances Perkins in front row platform seat squired by Columnist Joe Alsop . . . rosy beige plastic donkey lapel pins enigmatically printed "I'm Just Wild About Harry" . . . Clare Boothe Luce, cool, unruffled, being asked why her nose never shined, cracking back "I don't seem to have the right glands in the right places" . . .

Adlai Stevenson, Illinois gubernatorial candidate and convention speech-maker, sporting a button labeled "Bryan and Stevenson" a relic of his grandpa's candidating with the silver tongued orator back in the naughty naughts . . . Mrs. Clark Clifford, prettily demure in baby blue off-shoulder cotton . . . Secretary of Navy John Sullivan's snappy necktie—a march of wooden soldiers—"It's not to be taken as my estimate of Army potential."

Laura Hobson, decorative author of "Gentleman's Agreement," on a journalistic assignment. The 78-year-old toothless Texas cowboy, in well-worn jeans, chaps, clacking spurs, who hitchhiked from home . . . the Bowery news correspondent Hobo Benson sitting in back of the hall sketching passersby. Dressed in ragged suit, 10-gallon hat covered with badges printed with his name, an up-to-date hearing device, and positively not a tooth, he showed the first instalment of life hot off the press in the current Bowery gazette.

PERSONALITIES: Mrs. Brien McMahon, Connecticut Senator's wife, lovelier than ever and sensibly sitting the convention out near the press lounge television set . . . Mrs. Millard Tydings, in ostrich trimmed black bonnet, pale blue printed dress . . . Mrs. Constantin Stackelberg making her debut as a reporter, covering for a Florida newspaper . . . Mrs. Claude Pepper at convention's close, shaking her pretty head glumly . . . Senator Connally, sitting plumb under a giant electric fan, his white hair blowing, cigar clenched unyieldingly, listening intently to speechmaking . . . Bascom Timmons polishing off his twenty-second convention (not consecutively, but Republican, Democratic, third party included) delighted because 14,000 advance copies of his book on Jack Garner are sold, delighted with his personal ill will campaign to prevent his Vice Presidential nomination . . .

Mrs. John Nicholas Brown late arriving after hostessing at a preconvention supper for the Rhode Island delegation . . . Lucky Rhode Islanders, also honored by Mrs. Mesta, were given the gastronomical works by the Navy's Assistant Secretary for Air . . . lobsters pate, champagne all in an aircooled ballroom complete with three-piece dance orchestra.

On the Washington Club Front . . .

In keeping with its international program, Kappa Alpha Theta recently presented a $1200 fellowship award to Eva Urzalova, Czechoslovakian teacher and social worker. Presentation was made at the organization's thirty-eighth annual convention held at Mackinac Island, Mich., according to Mrs. Paul E. Shorb, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of the organization.

Mrs. Schorb represented the local group at the conclave. Other delegates included Miss Rosemary Glenn of George Washington University; Miss Mary Jane Schermerhorn, Maryland University chapters. Others back from the conclave are Mrs. Donald Hogate, District president; Mrs. Scott Brewer, and Miss Ann Abel.

In the past biennium, five scholarships of $500 each have been awarded to Barbara Ball, University of California; Audrey Helzer, University of Cincinnati; Elizabeth Edwards, University of Oregon; Barbara Feller, University of Pennsylvania, and Dorothy Pikes of Drake University.

Kappa Alpha Theta's National philanthropy is the Institute of Logopedics at Wichita, Kans. Since the last national convention in 1946, $20,000 has been contributed toward its support. Under the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children, another one of the Fraternity's philanthropies, 50 foreign children were cared for.

During the convention Mrs. Paul K. French of Burlington, Vt., was installed as Grand President.

Other officers elected were: Mrs. Robert McCutchen, Lebanon, Ind., first vice president; Mrs. James Crawford, Norman, Okla., second vice president; Mrs. James Hofstead, treasurer; Mrs. Kinzie Miller, jr., Pasadena, Calif., alumnae secretary, and Miss L. Pearle Green, Ithaca, N. Y., editor.

Betts; chaplain, Miss Virginia Patterson; recording secretary, Mrs. Nellie Vinson Beall; corresponding secretary, Miss Ruth Phillips; treasurer, Mrs. Joseph Lyvers; registrar, Mrs. George McHenry; historian, Miss Virginia Patterson; librarian, Mrs. George McHenry.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Devoted Wife of Kindly Husband Is Disturbed By His Obvious Interest in Boldly Coquettish Neighbor Whose Meal-Ticket Is Seldom at Home

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I, now in our forties, were married quite young, and we have one child, a daughter now grown and away from home. We are a compatible couple in every way, have a lovely home, George is very kind to me and I love him deeply.

My concern has to do with a neighbor, a married woman who lives on our street, whose husband seems to be a complete cipher except as family provider. He is away from home much of the time, and I can't help wondering if there is, or has been, something between this woman and George.

Whenever she comes out on her porch, George finds excuse to go over and spend considerable time with her, either on the porch or in the house. Likewise, when he is working in our yard she calls across until she gets his attention and he goes over. When driving by her house, he will slow down and gaze intently at her windows, not knowing that I have observed this.

Says the Coquette Is "Very Ordinary"

GEORGE is very social by nature, his work takes him in and out of his office a great deal, he enjoys people and is interested in their problems, but I wouldn't have thought that a person of her type would appeal to him. She is very ordinary in every way, has quite a temper when aroused and is very sure of herself.

Once I questioned him about the situation, then regretted doing so, for it caused a real rift between us. He was hurt and offended that I doubted him and he vigorously defends the lady on every occasion, so there is no use trying to discuss it with him. I don't want to say or do anything to hurt our marriage, but how can I learn what, if anything, goes on? Please advise.

C. T.

Neighbor's Wiles Are Old as Hills

DEAR C. T.: One doesn't need second-sight to see that the neighbor is making passes at George, figuratively at least, and maybe literally also, when she gets him indoors, with the result that she has caught his fancy for the time being.

You say you wouldn't have thought that a person of her type would appeal to him. Had she paid him no mind, I daresay he wouldn't have given her a second look. It is her boldly advertised interest in George that draws his attention and has ensnared him into the foolish habit of watching for her signals and flirting back.

Her come-on technique is as old as the hills. One of my analyst friends was discussing it recently. He says it usually works, at least to the extent that a man is willing to get involved, and consists in this: The woman spots her game and gets his attention by actions which say, "Look at me! I'm interested in you!" After which he's on the hook, unless compelling counter-considerations prompt him to snub the approach.

Man Feigns Anger To Hide Anxiety

UP TO NOW, George has been swallowing the neighbor's bait, also the hook, line and sinker, it seems; feeling both adventurous and guilty about the proceedings, I suppose, and all the while hoping that you, the dear wife of his bosom, wouldn't catch on he was playing the fool.

Naturally he was disturbed by your questioning; but not hurt or offended. Rather he was unhappily defensive, without a good cause, therefore feigned anger to shut you off. Also, to further cover himself, he's obliged to speak well of the neighbor, of course.

For advice: Don't be a simpleton, confused into silence by your husband's bluff, and don't be a jealous fearful wife, either. Without probing the details of what goes on, take a forthright stand against what you see. Express your objections briskly, tartly, wittily, sniffing at George's defense of "the lady." Tell him how she looks from a woman's angle; and never mind if he reacts furiously. Your views will sink in, to clear his head, even though he may never admit it. And he will love you more for flashing fire when his actions deserve it.

Trading Post To Benefit College Drive

A BIT OF frontier days color will be revived when the Mount Holyoke Club of Washington opens its "Trading Post," Saturday, with a gala open house, 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. in the National Cathedral School for Girls.

The Trading Post, one of the projects of the club in its drive to raise its share of a two-million-dollars fund for Mount Holyoke, will feature an assortment of homemade articles. All will be on sale at the opening and successive Saturdays. This old fashioned store idea gives alumnae a chance to carry out the desire of the college that pledges be earned rather than donated.

For her part Mrs. Walter Judd, wife of the Minnesota Representative, has knitted mittens. Mrs. Donnell Young, a well known craftsman from Bethesda, Md., has made many hand woven articles, perky half felt hats as well as jewelry.

Handmade pottery ranging from the classical to the Pennsylvania Dutch style, baked goods, a new kind of clothespin, paper napkins that won't crush and toys for children will also be found at the Trading Post.

In charge of the Trading Post is Mrs. M. E. Parkinson of Bethesda, assisted by Miss Marjorie Belcher, and Miss Betty Didcoct. Mrs. Frank L. Weaver is in charge of the tea arrangements and Miss Eleanor Spence is in charge of hostesses.

PLYING their talents in order to earn pledge money for their share in the alumnae's two million dollar drive are several versatile members of the Mount Holyoke Club of Washington. Here Mrs. William F. Lerch, III (left) first vice president of the local alumnae, inspects hand-painted glasses while Miss Betty Didcoct (right) puts the finishing touches on some pottery. These items will be among many displayed and sold when the Capital Group opens its "Trading Post," Saturday, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. in the National Cathedral School for Girls. Food, clothing and toys will also be offered at the Trading Post

MISS BARBARA YOUNG, student at Mount Holyoke College, will exhibit her fan collection when the Mount Holyoke Club of Washington opens its "Trading Post," Saturday in the National Cathedral School for Girls. Purpose of the unique post is to raise funds in the alumnae's campaign for two million dollars. Barbara's mother, a well known craftsman, will contribute jewelry and woven articles the Wianno Club with the Ministers joining them when duties permit.

Wednesday night the Wianno Club put on a champagne waltz with colony and club members as judges. Mrs. Andrews got the bubble water for showing the greatest skill in following a specialty dance put on by a couple of Astaire dancers sent up from New York.

THE Gibson Islanders, for sweet charity's sake, have let themselves in for quite a day on Thursday, July 27. The Chesapeake Bay resorters have planned a benefit for the little island church, St. Christopher's By-the-sea, to begin at 9:30 or thereabouts in the morning.

The small fry will have the club for the early hours with games planned in a carousel setting of huge cardboard horses, gay-colored streamers, a hot dog stand, et al. A rollicking Gibson Island version of the "Three Little Pigs" and "The Big Bad Wolf" will be put on by the very young set. Everybody on the island takes part in this annual event. The afternoon will be taken up by lunch from 12 to 2; card party from 2 to 4. Dinner will be at 7 p. m., when the price of admission for the ladies to the club's cabaret will be the purchase of a hat, made of paper flowers. The Junior Fleet Orchestra composed of musicians from 7 years and upwards will alternate with the Rivers Chamber Orchestra for dancing and there'll be the usual features of all church benefits—the gift table, and homemade cake and candy.

DAR Sending Girls to Camp Merrick

The Girl Home Makers Committee, D. C. DAR, is sending eight District girls to Camp Merrick, the Christ Child Society summer camp at Wild Rose Shores, Md., for two weeks.

The Junior Group of the Mary Washington Chapter cooperated with the Girl Home Makers Committee under the retiring State chairman, Mrs. W. H. Schreinert, to raise the funds to give the girls a summer outing.

The campers are Nancy Piccioni, Rose Marie Whalen, Shirley, Betty, and Virgie Swartz, Lorraine Barock, Elizabeth and Patricia Halvik.

Mrs. David L. Wells, State regent, announced that Mrs. William M. Carrigan is the new chairman of the girl homemakers committee.

place. Beeves are killed and the meat kept in a home freezer. Hams and bacon are cured. There is a flock of chickens, too, and various fruit trees on the farm. In the fall, the Senator goes hunting on the bay and adds wild ducks to the larder. The tradition is the old fashioned one of living off the land—and the water—aided now by modern equipment and conveniences.

WITH such a source of food at hand and the skill to prepare it available, it's not surprising that meals are unusually good at Oakington. The Tydings don't go in for such traditional and tedious-to-prepare dishes as creamed terrapin, but they enjoy menus like the following which feature typical Maryland dishes:

CRABMEAT COCKTAIL
Fried Chicken — Cream Gravy
Corn Fritters — Green Beans and Asparagus
Hot Biscuit — Mixed Green Salad
Homemade Ice Cream
Lady Baltimore Cake

The chicken is rolled in flour seasoned with salt and pepper, then browned on both sides in fairly deep fat. The heat is then turned to low, the pan covered, and the chicken allowed to cook until thoroughly done.

The green beans and asparagus are served on a platter together, the French-cut beans heaped in the center of the dish and surrounded by bundles of asparagus tied with strips of pimiento—not necessarily a Maryland dish, but a very attractive one.

The corn fritters are made by the following recipe:

CORN FRITTERS

1 cup flour
1 cup milk
1½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 cup corn, cut from the cob

Beat egg very light. Add milk alternately with dry ingredients, sifted together. Add melted butter and corn and mix well. Drop by spoonsful into very hot, deep fat and fry to golden brown. Add more flour if dough seems too thin.

THE following recipe is used at Oakington for making Lady Baltimore cake, that fruity and delicious Maryland dessert:

LADY BALTIMORE CAKE

1 cup butter
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 cup milk
3 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla or almond extract

Cream the butter and add the sugar. Add the beaten egg yolks, then the milk alternately with sifted dry ingredients. Add extract and fold in beaten whites last of all. Bake in two 9-inch cake pans in a 375-degree oven.

ICING

¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt
1/3 cup cold water
8 marshmallows
2 beaten egg whites
½ cup chopped raisins
½ cup chopped walnuts
2 figs, finely cut
½ teaspoon almond or vanilla extract

Mix the first four ingredients and stir until sugar dissolves. Cook on a low heat until syrup dropped from a spoon will spin a thread. (Keep covered and do not stir while cooking.) Pour syrup gradually on beaten egg whites, beating all the while. Add marshmallows and beat until they dissolve and mixture stands in peaks. Add chopped fruits and nuts and spread on layers as filling and icing.

CRAB, brought in fresh from the Chesapeake Bay, is often on the menu at Oakington. A favorite way of serving it is in Crab Maryland, a creamed dish.

CRAB MARYLAND

½ cup butter
1 cup cream
1 tablespoon flour
1 wine glass good sherry
Salt and pepper to taste

Melt butter in heavy frying pan. Add crab and heat thoroughly. Sprinkle with flour, salt and pepper. Add cream and toss lightly until all is thoroughly heated. Add sherry last, just before serving in a bowl, garnished with toast points.

On the Town

EIGHTEEN years ago down in Mexico, a daughter was born to the Moreno family. By the age of 4, little Rosita was spending a good deal of her waking hours dancing and singing. Then came a fiesta, and, of course, the Moreno family attended.

ROSITA

Sometime during the proceedings mama missed the newest member of the family. There was a frantic search and Rosita was found dancing the La Bomba (a sort of Mexican hat dance) on the stage with the rest of the entertainers.

From that day Rosita more or less concentrated on getting into show business. She got her start at 13 when she acted in a floperoo up New York way called "Sky Drift." The experience was thrilling if not profitable. Since then she's been following the night club circuit around the country.

Rosita knows what she wants, and this dancing thing is just a means to an end. Her real goal is the legit stage and an acting role. But right now Rosita is at the Casino Royal, burning up the board with several fiery south of the border numbers put on with a lot of personality and zip.

Dipping south of several borders, the next act at the Casino originated in Australia. It's called Leslie and Laurence. They're a ballroom dance team with a little different twist. Laurence, the male half of the act, does a rubber-boned, double-jointed, muscle-stretching routine of contorting himself into the most impossible positions, such as throwing his legs over his shoulders and walking on his hands. A little side note is that Laurence comes from Broken Hills, Australia, the home town of Ambassador Norman Makin, and they're quite good friends.

Some years ago Leslie and Laurence were touring the country in the A. B. Marcus revue. They were scheduled to go overseas for a tour, and when one of the singers and baggy pants comics was refused a $5 a week raise, he quit. The boy was Danny Kaye.

The other part of the show is Henry Wood, a bicycle acrobat who's good. He does a drunk act on a unicycle that panics the crowd. All in all, it's the best show the Casino has had in some time.

BULL MOOSE JACKSON and his boys are at the Club Bali for one week, unless they are held over as the Louis Armstrong sextet was. That's quite possible, since there seems to be enough jazz fans in town to fill a place whenever the management can book a hot band.

The Bali has done well this season with Rose Murphy, Savannah Churchill, Armstrong and a number of others. It proves that when you offer the better talent the business comes to you.

Another outfit that's just opened is the Four Tunes at Perruso's. They accompanied Savannah Churchill while she was in town.

THE Pall Mall Room at the Raleigh will be closing down for the summer soon. Its last act is Jacqueline Taylor, who, according to the Raleigh press agent, is a "zephyr from the Rockies."

Chesapeake Beach Park won't be having a name band this weekend. Instead it's featuring a beauty contest (semifinals, that is) to pick a "Miss Nation's Capital." Twenty-five girls are entered. Later Saturday night there'll be a dance. Next week Carmen Cavallero and his boys will be there.

GOOD WAY to speed up housecleaning chores is with the new "sudsy" ammonia. No soap is needed when using this product, which is a fine grease-cutter and dirt chaser. It's recommended for cleaning windows, washing dishes, shampooing rugs and upholstery, cleaning walls and many other purposes.

Exercise to Make Dreams Come True

Run for fun! Columbia Pictures' star, Gloria Henry, exemplifies the sure, pure joy that can be captured through freedom of motion as described in Ida Jean Kain's column. Gloria's latest picture is "Port Said"

By Ida Jean Kain

WITHOUT imagination, life would be dismally dull . . . there would be no quickening of the spirit . . . or reaching to make dreams come true. But if we don't use imagination, we lose it.

Let's use it! If you feel down in the dumps and hopelessly bulky, instead of lithe and limber and free . . . stretch your imagination to banish the fat and the inertia that bind muscle and spirit.

Turn on some music . . . then move with the rhythm of the music. The secret of joy in exercise is rhythm . . . moving freely so that the motion is smooth and flowing. Sense the rhythm as you circle arms up and around and bend from side to side . . . slim and supple. Well, maybe not supple at first, or slim either—but you will be.

Perhaps you think of exercise mainly as streamlining your measurements. It does that, for exercise puts live tone back in lazy, flabby muscles, holding the figure to slimmer lines. But think of rhythmic motion as a means of changing awkward, heavy movements into buoyant, graceful movements . . . and this will be reflected in the way you rise from a chair, sit down, walk across a room or swing along the avenue. In exercise, aim toward beautiful movements.

EXERCISE makes for freedom of motion. It can be almost like dancing . . . try it.

To banish tension from the shoulders, swing alternate arms in wide backward circles, rhythmically, circling up, back, down and around . . . and before the circle is quite completed, start circling with the other arm in smooth motion. Now without imagination, you could stand there, slumped in a lump, just making circles. But with imagination, the lift comes clear from your toes! With the first upswing of the arm, lift your chin, pull slim through the middle . . . get a lift. And feel the rhythm in each slow, smooth circle of the arms.

Then are arms gracefully overhead, the way dancers do, and again pull up with those bulky middle muscles, s-t-r-e-t-c-h-i-n-g through the middle, then bend willowy to the side . . . not too far . . . back to position . . . bend to the other side. As your muscles become supple, you'll bend more freely. And you'll feel buoyed up . . . not heavy.

Exercise to be really worth the while should do as much for the spirit as it does for the muscles. Then it can pull you out of the rut, mentally and physically. Exercise isn't a bore—it's fun and freeing!

About Insect Sprays

Tell me how to get rid of the bees which have made seven "nests" right inside the wooden rails on our porch? The baby bees are beginning to swarm over the porch and I would certainly appreciate any advice as to how to get rid of them.

F. S.

Since you say the insects have made "nests," it seems doubtful that they are bees. They might be wasps or hornets. These insects make nests of clay or structures resembling paper. To destroy them, use a DDT liquid insect spray or a moth killer. If necessary use a ladder to get very near so that the spray is effective. Approach the nests at dusk when the insects are inside and work quickly, directing the cloud of spray at the opening. If the insects attempt to leave, they will be stunned by the spray and fall. The liquid spraying into the opening will saturate the structure and destroy the insects or make them incapable of flight. After a little time, the nests can be taken down and burned. Be sure all buzzing inside the nest has ceased before taking them down, then burn them quickly before the stunned insects have a chance to revive.

Another method which is sometimes effective is to play the full force of the water hose onto them. However, if the nests are not all together, it may be difficult to reach them simultaneously with the hose. If they are not all touched with the hose at one time, the disturbance may bring out the untouched ones before their nests can be destroyed.

Probably the safest method is to spray them with insect spray first and then soak the nests with the hose.

I have an old pier console—whose marble top has been broken in several places. Would you advise a new marble slab, or one made of matching wood?

E. R. S.

The value of an old piece of furniture is greatly enhanced if it is kept in every respect the same as it was originally. Therefore, if it is at all possible for you to have a marble slab put on top of this piece, I would suggest you do it. If that isn't possible, then as second choice use the wood top.

We are building an 18-foot by 10-foot porch on the back of our house. For economy's sake, it is just the floor of the porch to start with. I wonder if any of your readers have had any success with homemade awnings? I would like to make one to cover the entire porch. Are there any stores which sell awning material where I might receive directions on how to go about such a project? B. F.

To be permanent, an awning as large as you want should be placed on a metal frame. After checking with several awning companies and the awning departments of two department stores, I can find none which sells such frames or would, in this busy season, make them to order for you. A wooden frame could no doubt be constructed by a person handy with hammer and nails. Such a frame would need to be supported by 2 in. by 4 in. posts from the floor, so would consequently be a little more cumbersome in appearance than one of metal.

Sew the awning material into a rectangle 18 ft. by 10 ft. and tack it to the frame. Awning material can be purchased by the yard at some awning companies and in the drapery departments of most department stores. For a professional-looking appearance, arrange for a 6 to 8 inch drop of the awning on all three sides to cover the framework and finish the edge of this drop with a scallop for decorative purposes. Also, sewing a heavy tape to the inside of the awning where it is to be tacked to the board will make it more wearable at this spot of strain.

PHILADELPHIA POSTMORTEM—Mayor O'Dwyer of New York won't campaign for Truman full-heartedly. O'Dwyer will decide that this fall, when the campaign is at its height, his proper place is in Paris, to persuade U. N. officials that they should not move the U. N. from New York City. . . . Jim Farley was amused by the young people chanting and carrying "We Want Douglas" signs. He pointed to the paraders and scoffed: "Not a single vote among 'em" . . . Jonathan Daniels, the Carolina publisher and former White House aide, said: "I'm Truman's Southern strength."

William Ritchie, chairman of the Nebraska delegation and one of the leaders of the anti-Truman fight, learned that Senator Pepper had declared himself a candidate for the nomination. Ritchie hesitated, then went to the hall where Pepper was making his announcement for the benefit of the photographers. Just before Ritchie clasped the Senator's hand, indicating his support, he confided to a friend: "I'm in the position of Robespierre: In seeing my mobs run down the street, I must rush to join them."

A newspaperman wrote an Eisenhower nomination speech for Col. Jack Arvey, the Illinois leader, who had it in his pocket for two weeks—right up until his arrival in Philadelphia . . . Herbert Hoover's report on the reorganization of the Federal Government will not be released until after the election, so that no political capital can be made of it.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Democratic Plight Laid to Truman

By Drew Pearson

Footnote on Philadelphia—There is nothing more agonizing than to watch a person die. At Philadelphia it was equally agonizing to watch a once-great party in its death struggle.

Pearson

It was especially agonizing because the doctor in charge wouldn't call in a specialist.

It seldom happens in real life, any more, because doctors have got over professional jealousy and use common sense about calling in specialists. But history will record that the tragic death struggles of the Democratic Party at Philadelphia were largely because one very nice, optimistic little man sat serene and confident, claiming that all would come out right if things were left to him. He flatly refused to call in a surgeon.

At first the relatives protested, said they wanted a new doctor. But the little family doctor said no. His old-fashioned medicine had been good enough before, he said, and it was good enough now. So the relatives sat around the bedside, quietly calculating what inheritance they could salvage out of the deceased's estate. They were reconciled to the death.

Personally, I don't like to see people die; so I came back to Washington early where a perspiring State Department is now grappling with the worst war crisis since Pearl Harbor.

Showdown in Berlin

Ire against Russia is so tense in Berlin that certain high-placed United States officials (civilians) have been urging Gen. Lucius Clay to break the Soviet blockade by force.

They want him to arm a food train in the American zone of Germany and send it speeding through the Russian zone to Berlin with United States troops in armored cars riding just behind the engine ready to shoot if the Russians resist.

These United States officials go so far as to plan counter-measures in case the Russians sabotage the rail line. They propose that a corps of United States Army engineers be sent along to repair any torn-up rails, also to repair the River Elbe bridge if blown up by the Russians.

Some officials, quite close to Clay, claim that Russia is not ready for war and would try to "localize" any trouble with the United States. There might be some clashes between United States and Red army troops around Berlin, they advise, but Russia would not let them spread to the rest of Europe. She would back down first.

General Clay, however, doesn't agree. So far he has rejected this explosive advice. He says that if an incident took place, you never can control men's passions. Trouble might spread whether Moscow wanted it or not. Privately, Clay has described such measures as "unwise and dangerous," likely to "commit us to war."

Instead General Clay favors economic sanctions, before making a move which could convert a cold war into a shooting war. For instance, Clay thinks that we have been too lenient with the Russians regarding shipping and air facilities, that we should crack down on the Russians economically. This would hurt, but not risk war.

In brief, here is one historic case where a soldier is reluctant to use force though civilians urge it. Congratulated by an old acquaintance on not being trigger-happy, General Clay remarked:

Tito's Publicity

Yugoslavia's frank Ambassador Sava Kasanovic was attending a diplomatic reception when Senator Harley Kilgore, West Virginia Democrat, joshed him about Yugoslavia's break with the Cominform.

"I notice," Kilgore greeted the Ambassador, "that Yugoslavia has been in the news lately."

"Yes," smiled Kasanovic, "we haven't needed a press agent for several days."

Behind the Note to Soviet

Here is the inside story behind the diplomatic protest sent by the United States, France and England against the Russian blockade of Berlin.

Real fact is that the United States did not inspire the recent simultaneous notes. It was the pet project of British Foreign Minister Bevin.

Late at night, Bevin summoned U. S. Ambassador Lew Douglas and French Ambassador Rene Massigli. Handing them copies of a note, he said that his advisers had prepared the draft of a protest to Moscow and that the United States, Great Britain and France ought to dispatch it simultaneously.

"See what you think of it," he said.

Ambassador Douglas replied that the United States would have to wait and study it. But the French Ambassador told Bevin on the spot that the note was too strong. France, he said, could not go along.

Later the French rewrote the original Bevin note. They pointed out that the note was an ultimatum based on such strong language that the Russians could give only one reply—a flat no. Instead they suggested a milder tone.

The United States concurred with the French and the final notes were based upon the general ideas proposed by the French.
